Judge Seeks Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate trial judge ordered President Nixon today to turn over for the judge's private inspection tapes subpoenaed by the Watergate prosecutor but stayed the order for five days to permit appeal.

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica said Nixon must "produce forthwith for the court's examination in camera" the tape recordings of Nixon's conversations with key aides implicated in the Watergate political espionage investigation.

He ordered the five-day delay and added that he would extend the stay indefinitely if the completion of appeals requires it.

Sirica's order apparently means that he would examine the tapes himself before deciding whether they ought to be turned over to the Watergate grand jury.

"... There is every reason to suppose an 'in camera' examination will materially aid the court in its decision," Sirica said in his acompanying 23-page opinion. "The fact that extensive accounts of the recorded conversations given under oath by participants are available will enable the court to make an intelligent and informed analysis of the evidence.

"The court is unable to design a more cautious approach consistent with the demonstrated critical need for the evidence and the serious questions raised concerning the applicability of the privilege asserted. The court has attempted to walk the middle ground between a failure to decide the question of privilege at one extreme, and a wholesale delivery of tapes to the grand jury at the other," Sirica said.

"... If it be apparent that the tapes are irrelevant to the investigation or that for state reasons they cannot be introduced into the case, the subpoena duces tecum would be useless. But if this be not apparent, if they may be important in the investigation, if they may be safely heard by the grand jury, if only in part, would it not be a blot on the page which records the judicial proceedings of this country, if, in a case of such serious imports as this, the court did not at least call for an inspection of the evidence in chambers?" Sirica concluded.

Nixon's lawyers charged earlier in the day the Senate Watergate committee was conducting "a criminal investigation and trial" that exceeded its authority.

At San Clemente, Calif., where President Nixon is vacationing, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said he would have no immediate comment on Sirica's ruling.

Reporter Kinsella can't enter

DIARY MAKES MAYOR SIZZLE

HIGH RIVER, Alta. (CP) — A diary, dropped in the town hall two weeks ago by reporter Darlene Kinsella, so incensed Mayor Stan Gordon that he banned her from all council meetings.

The rookie reporter's diary contained her personal impressions of the mayor and council members.

"I guess it was a bit embarassing for them to be confronted with my notes," Miss Kinsella said in an interview. "But I never thought anyone else would see it."

Miss Kinsella said she was unaware her diary was missing until the mayor said the council had the alleged defamatory statements in her own handwriting.

"I denied spreading any statements of the kind he suggested and asked him to tell me where I had written them.

"The mayor was so insistent that I left, though I have since learned that they had no power to send me away like that. I don't think they have any right to hold onto the diary either and I want it back."

Her newspaper, the Fort Spitzee Signal, was born last March to protest council's asking the provincial government to close down the local office of the department of youth, culture and recreation. The Signal has retained a lawyer to retrieve the diary.

David Mercer, a founder of the newspaper which has a circulation of about 700 copies weekly, said the request to close down the youth office made the town look foolish, "but they really goofed this time."

BREAD UP 7c IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Retail prices for name-brand bread here will rise seven cents a 24-ounce loaf to 41 cents a loaf effective today, it was announced Tuesday. (See price story on Page 3).

Spokesmen for local bakeries said the increase was based on the current prices for flour, up almost 30 per cent over mid-July prices.

'INSTANT BANKRUPTCY'

Farms in Feed Crisis

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Vancouver Island's chicken farms face instant bankruptcy unless they can get deliveries of feed after current supplies run out on Saturday.

The development comes amid indications that even if Parliament orders a swift settlement to the national rail strike militants in B.C. will refuse to return to work.

The 18 major Island poultry farmers and 450,000 chickens rely upon feed supplies from Buckerfields Ltd.

In Duncan, Buckerfields manager Phil Moody said supplies of wheat were rapidly disappearing because of the train-and-rail-barge strike and feed was being rationed to customers until Friday.

After that?

"We don't know. If the trains are rolling by Saturday we are hopeful."

If the feed runs out, Island poultry farmers say they will be out of business 24 hours later.

Richard Fatt of Fatt's Poultry Farm has 60,000 broiler chickens.

"They are in huge rooms with about 15,000 chickens to a room. They are fed automatically.

"If the feed runs out, they start to panic.

"Within two or three hours some of them will start to turn cannibal. Then it spreads. With 15,000 in a room it is a horrible sight ... horrible.

"I have seen films ... I would never want to see it happen here."

He said he has enough feed to last until the weekend but is counting on a further order to keep his chickens fed. They consume about 60 tons of feed per week.

Peter Goddard of Claremont Poultry Ltd. has 28,000 laying hens.

He also has enough feed on hand to last until the weekend.

"Laying birds must have feed continuously," he said.

"They are geared for high production. If they go without feed or water for 24 hours they stop laying — and they won't start again for six weeks.

"There isn't much profit in this business right now with the high cost of feed. That would be the finish.

2 MEN TRAPPED ON SUNKEN SUB

Times News Services

Two crewmen are trapped today aboard a tiny Pisces submarine 1,500 feet below the surface of the Atlantic 150 miles off the coast of Eire while crash rescue preparations are being made on two continents.

The tiny craft was engaged in a pipe-laying project when the crewmen reported that they were experiencing trouble and unable to surface.

The Canadian-developed Pisces was one of three of the small vessels sold to a British firm, Vickers Oceanic.

The firm plans to fly another of the craft from northern Scotland to assist in rescue operations and the crafts' maker, International Hydrodynamics is readying a third submersible in Halifax to be flown to Ireland aboard a Canadian Forces Hercules.

It is believed that the two vessels will attempt to hook chains to the one in trouble and tow it to the surface.

Court Battle Looms

The controversial Kingsview Properties Ltd. housing development in North Cowichan appears to be shaping up for a second round in the courts.

"There's no question in my mind," Victoria lawyer Ian Stewart said today, "the matter will be going back to the courts."

Stewart was reacting to the announcement by Kingsview director George Treit, the company had decided to go ahead with plans for a massive housing development on Mount Tzouhalem at Maple Bay in spite of recent amendments to a land-use contract forced on them by North Cowichan council.

The amendments reduce the units from 1,350 to 1,250, exclude apartments and town houses and add another 10 acres of parks and playground on the 505-acre site.

Stewart represents hundreds of Maple Bay residents opposing the development, on the grounds that it will destroy the rural atmosphere of the area, create traffic horrors and overtax utilities.

The residents had the original land-use contract quashed in court earlier this year.

"It's not surprising they (Kingsview) have decided to accept it," Stewart said, "the amendments are just another blank cheque for the developers.

"The council has made no effort whatsoever and has obviously not taken into account the wishes of the residents."

Treit said his company will be notifying the council of its decision next week.

"We're going to go ahead and agree with the amendments," he said. "It's going to take very close supervision. We've had the directors together and we've decided we're going to go."

Asked if the reduction of units would pose an economic hurdle, Treit said that "time and inflation" would compensate for the reduction.

In spite of massive turnouts of opposing residents at four public meetings, North Cowichan council has stood pat on its assertion the Kingsview development is needed to provide housing for the influx of newcomers expected in the next few years.

Questioned after the meeting at which, in a surprise move the council gave first-reading on the amendments, Mayor Gerry Smith asserted council had been given legal assurance that no further public hearing would be required under the Municipal Act.

Residents at the meeting claimed that they should have the right to make their views known on the amendments.

U.S. Snags B.C. Gas Price Hike

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plan to boost the price of B.C. natural gas exports ran into some unexpected opposition from the U.S. Federal Power Commission here Tuesday.

The opposition was based on fears about the export of U.S. capital for natural gas exploration in northern B.C.

A decision on the price boost, and provision for an increase in the amount of gas exported, was deferred until autumn by Judge A. C. Lande who conducted a brief public hearing at the FPC headquarters.

In Vancouver, provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he is glad the U.S. body has delayed a decision.

He said the extra time will allow the British Columbia Energy Commission to complete its report, expected Sept. 15.

The provincial government opposes the proposed increase as not being nearly high enough.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. wants to raise the export price by 4.8 cents per 1,000 cubic feet and to increase exports to El Paso Natural Gas Corp., its U.S. distributor, by half, or 450 million cubic feet to a potential total of 1,250 million cubic feet.

Part of Westcoast's agreement with El Paso, which has already been cleared by the Canadian National Energy Board in Ottawa, would provide for establishment of an $80 million exploration fund to finance drilling for new gas wells.

This was what drew objections from lawyers appearing for the FPC at the hearing.

However, B.C. Energey Commission representatives, appearing at the hearing as non-intervening observers, said privately that there is no question of importing $80 million in U.S. funds for this purpose.

They said that the money would be borrowed by Westcoast in Canada. El Paso was agreeing only to supply the interest on this loan, they said.

The FPC also questioned El Paso and Westcoast representatives closely about the regulations in Canada regarding export and the possibility of future increases in gas prices.

Railmen Lobby MPs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Striking railway union leaders, mindful that many of their rank and file are militant and resentful, launched an effort Tuesday to outline to MPs their need for an "adequate settlement."

The move came as about 1,500 members of the non-operating workers association marched through downtown Toronto in a show of determisation to stay out until they get what they feel is a fair settlement.

Ross Jones, president of the 10,000-member Toronto local, suggested railway workers may call in sick if they don't like a settlement decreed by Parliament.

"We're not going to bow down like sheep again," he said in an interview, referring to a return-to-work order by Parliament which ended the 1966 national rail strike.

Cabinet met Tuesday to work out details of the bill that is to end the national rail strike.

Rain After Quake

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Torrential rains drenched rescue workers in some parts of southeast Mexico City today as they searched for bodies or trapped survivors from the worst earthquake in modern Mexican history. (Picture on Page 3.)

The rains added to an already serious flood problem and drove more people from their homes.

The Associated Press said late figures from the quake areas 120 to 220 miles south and east of Mexico City indicated more than 500 persons died in the devastating earth shock at 3:51 a.m. Tuesday. It was the highest death toll of an earthquake in Mexico since the keeping of such records started in the early 1900s.

The quake, coming during the worst rainy season in 30 years, extended a disaster area that already covered much of central Mexico. Seventy-six persons have died in floods in the last month, the homes of more than 400,000 have been damaged and millions of dollars worth of crops have been ruined.

CanCel Showed Profit Before B.C. Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., controlled by the British Columbia government, Tuesday reported net income for the first half of this year of $5,712,000 or 47 cents a common share.

The earnings, up from a loss of $7,386,000 or 61 cents a share for the first half of 1972, were reported to shareholders by president Donald Gross in an interim statement.

This year's first half net income, made on sales of $71,084,000, was reported as of June 29 before the write-down of assets associated with the company's reorganization. On that date Celanese Corp. of New York wrote off its position in Columbia Cellulose Co., Ltd. Canadian Cellulose was an operating subsidiary of Columbia.

From a bookkeeping view, the second half shows a loss of $67,038,000 or $5.50 per share, reflecting the $7,750,000 of asset write-downs connected with the Celanese divestiture. The large deficit figure will continue to show on the books for some time.

Net income for the second quarter was $4,663,000 on sales of $41,233,000 compared with the second quarter of 1972 when there was a net loss of $3,176,000 on sales of $33,714,000.

Sales for the first half of 1972 were $58,892,000. Calculations of profits per share are made on 12,191,203 shares now outstanding. Of these, 79 per cent are held by B.C. Cellulose Co. Ltd. for the provincial government, 14 per cent went to former Colcel preferred shareholders and the balance to Colcel common shareholders.

Lin Piao Purged 'Forever'

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party, meeting in secret session, held its 10th national congress in Peking from Aug. 24 to 28 and adopted a new party constitution, Peking radio announced today.

Mao Tse-Tung, the party chairman for almost 40 years, presided over the session. Premier Chou En-Lai, considered the No. 2 man behind Mao, delivered the usual political report.

Peking Radio, broadcasting the official press communique, said the congress was "held solemnly" and "was a congress of unity, a congress of victory and a congress full of vigor."

The communique denounced the late Lin Piao, once the crown prince of Chinese Communism, as a traitor and purged him from the party "forever." It said that Chen Po-Ta, who once served as Mao's private secretary and confidante, also was purged "forever."

Lin, defence minister for more than a dozen years, was named as "successor" to Mao by an unprecedented article in the party constitution adopted at the 9th national congress, held in April 1969.

He died in a plane crash in Mongolia in September 1971 while trying to flee to the Soviet Union after an abortive coup d'etat attempt against Mao, according to accounts given by Chou and other Chinese leaders to visitors to China.

Chen Po-Ta was purged at the 2nd plenary session of the central committee of the 9th party congress, held in September 1970, a year before Lin fell.

One of the key purposes of the 10th congress, which came before it was scheduled, was to revise the constitution to eliminate the section which specified that Lin was Mao's "close comrade-in-arms and successor."

Flood Disaster May Swamp Government of Pakistan

LARKANA, Pakistan (WP) — Muddy waters swirling five and six feet deep over hundreds of miles of Pakistan has forced the evacuation of entire towns and left thousands of people huddled on mud embankments — the only high ground left.

Government officials call the floods the worst natural disaster in Pakistan's history.

The waters have not only driven millions from their homes, but also have delivered a stunning blow to the nation's economy, presenting Prime Minister Sulifikar Ali Bhutto with the need to provide rapid, effective disaster aid or take the political consequences from masses of poor people the water has made yet poorer.

The overwhelming scope of destruction caused by the mammoth floods was brought into focus by a bewildered man named Patan Khan, of Kangan.

Eyes blinking uncomprehendingly, he stared across the seemingly endless sea of muddy water stretching before him.

"It came so quickly," he said. "We had no time. We lost everything."

Khan and his family fled from their village one week ago when Pakistan army troops warned them that the canal was going to be breached on the side facing their village to save the city of Larkana.

The entire population of Kangan, about 800 persons, made the seven-mile trek to the canal embankment. Like Patan, all have almost nothing with them.

They cluster on the narrow earthern wall along the major irrigation canal which feeds the villages outside Larkana, the home of Prime Minister Bhutto.

In all 33,000 people were forced to leave their homes when the Larkana canal was breached in four places along its 12-mile length. Most of them now are living on the embankment.

"In a few days," said Patan Khan, "the grain we brought with us will be gone. Then we hope the government will care for us."

Prime Minister Bhutto hopes too that the government will be able to feed Khan and his family and perhaps a million other families like them throughout Sind and Punjab provinces.

"We've got about one month's stock," Bhutto said. "It's not much and it has to go over most of the country."

He travelled by helicopter Tuesday through the two flooded provinces.

"We were just coming out of the woods," the prime minister said. "The economy was doing extremely well. This is a setback I don't want to exaggerate, and we'll have to wait for an evaluation until we know just how major a setback it is. But there is no doubt that it's hurt us a great deal."

Aside from the loss in foreign exchange earnings, the country will need major supplies of foods to keep people alive for at least six months, when the winter wheat crop comes in. In order to make that crop a good one, vast amounts of fertilizer will be needed to replace nutrients washed out of the soil by the floodwater.

Too hot even for fire-walkers

Like most other residents of southern Ontario, these gentlemen want nothing other in the present heat wave than to get their shoes off and expose their toes to what little coolness there is. Only difference, however, is that they are part of a troupe of Fijian firewalkers entertaining at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, and daily walk over a bed of burning coals to earn their livelihood. Tuesday, temperatures in Toronto rose to a record 106 degrees.

Change, Please!

Department store cashiers are requesting that extra penny or nickel if you have it, because of a coin shortage prompted by the rail strike.

"We're certainly aware of the coin shortage, and are trying to conserve coins, especially pennies," a spokesman for The Bay's credit department said today.

Banks report the coin shortage is becoming more critical. The government hasn't shipped any coins by rail since the non-operating railways unions' rotating strikes against 11 rail companies started July 26.

"The situation's terrible," said Royal Bank assistant manager Bill Callin.

"We're having a tough time getting coins, and we're relying heavily on laundromat owners and other concession owners who bring their coinage in and bank it."

He said he sees no relief in sight until the rail strike has been settled, although there are some reports that Toronto banks might start trucking coinage west.

A spokesman for Woodward's said the shortage is not limited to Victoria.

CHICKEN FEED RUNNING OUT

"If the hens starve they can not be sold for processing because there's nothing left but feathers.

"We don't want to sell them for processing. We would wait as long as we can. By the time we found we had to sell them it would be too late.

"It takes two weeks before an order of chickens can be handled by the processors. By then, there would be nothing left but feathers."

Goddard said he was remaining hopeful that high priority would be placed on grain when the strike ends so that chickens do not die while non-essential goods are moved.

Buckerfields had purchased all available grain stored on Vancouver Island and could not locate any further supplies on this side of the water.

It was relying upon trucks from the mainland which have been given a high priority on B.C. Ferries to bring feed supplies to the Island.

Vancouver grain supplies were also running low.

Buckerfields bought all available wheat from Victoria Elevators Ltd. at Ogden Point at just over $6 per bushel, compared to the regular domestic price of $3.80.

"This is costing us thousands of dollars," Moody said. "But we have to keep our customers supplied."

He said if the trains are rolling again this weekend then he was quite hopeful that trucks could bring enough wheat over from the mainland to avert disaster.

But handling the backlog of supplies after a strike could be quite chaotic, he said.

RAILMEN LOBBY RETURNING MPs

Union leaders — after talking with strike co-ordinators across the country — found the workers to be resentful of Prime Minister Trudeau's recall of Parliament, a spokesman said.

Dissatisfaction among the railway workers — who feel parliamentary intervention in the past has made them fall behind others in similar occupations — has made delays in renewed rail service likely.

And Richard Smith, chairman of the non-op bargaining committee, said it was evident that Labor Minister John Munro was optimistic in expressing the hope that rail operations would start again by Saturday or Sunday.

Meanwhile, among the effects of the strike:

Imperial Oil held a day-long emergency meeting in Vancouver Tuesday to find a solution to developing shortages of fuel supplies in different parts of B.C.

Clifford Goddard, Imperial Oil B.C. corporate manager, said supplies to Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland would not be affected, but a serious supply problem was developing in several interior points.

Most severely affected were Revelstoke and Ashcroft, which receive much of their gasoline by train.

Imperial, like other companies, was trying to obtain highway tanker trucks to supply customers but shortages were developing. There were few trucks available because all companies were seeking them at the same time, Goddard said.

At the present time motorists can be assured of finding gasoline at regular intervals throughout the interior, although they will occasionally encounter gas stations that have run dry.

In most areas, where one company has run dry, another company has gasoline.

All companies were worried about the supply situation if the rail strike were to continue through the weekend.

Special Soy Status

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Canada has been accorded special status under the U.S. program of agricultural export controls which will result in a drastic increase in the import of scarce U.S. soybean and soy bean byproducts.

U.S. Secretary of Commerce Frederick Dent has agreed to the special exemption, which is effective immediately, it was learned today.

This will permit Canada to triple its import of soybeans and soybean meal over the level permitted by the tough U.S. program of export controls on protein feed supplements announced July 2.

Although the special concession from the United States commerce department was not revealed publicly — either in Washington or Ottawa — feed grain importers in Canada were informed by the federal government.

Utilities Endorse Hike

The B.C. Engergy Commission is currently working on a study of the nautral gas industry and will report to the B.C. cabinet by Sept. 15. One of the likely recommendations of the commission is for the B.C. government to press Ottawa for a hefty increase in export prices.

Commission chairman James Rhodes and counsel Martin Taylor attended Tuesday's hearing but took no part in the proceedings.

They said they would make no comment on the hearings or the application because it would be a breach of protocol.

However, the proposal is one of the things the commission is considering in its study. An interim commission report said that export prices should be raised by 50 per cent. The provincial government endorsed the report and asked the National Energy Board to postpone consideration of the El Paso-Westcoast deal until after the energy commission report is received.

The NEB maintained its approval was not necessary and that the deal could be carried out without its specific approval as it met existing export regulations.

Representatives of eight U.S. utility companies endorsed the deal at the hearings, as well as spokesmen for Washington state and Idaho government agencies.

They are all customers of El Paso who would receive more gas under the proposal.

Judge Lande allowed interested parties until Sept. 14 to file additional briefs or comments and until Oct. 21 to make final rebuttal or answers to questions.

the weather

With the exception of the north coast temperatures are expected to ease upward today. An area of high pressure should continue to promote a drying trend throughout the province during the next couple of days.

Food Prices Go On Up Except for Vegetarians

By The Canadian Press

If you are a vegetarian, your food bill may be slightly less this month.

But if you eat hot dogs, chicken, fish or butter, your bill has continued to get bigger.

A survey of 11 Canadian cities indicates the only consistent drop in prices has been in seasonal produce, such as potatoes and tomatoes.

The prices of 17 common food items have been checked in cross-Canada surveys by The Canadian Press at four-week intervals since May 30. Two extra surveys were done in August.

They show continuing increases in beef, pork and chicken, and smaller but steady increases in several cities in staples such as eggs and bread. The once inexpensive hot dog has gone up as much as 26 cents a pound to $1.18 a pound in Halifax.

The surveys are not intended to compare prices from city to city, but to determine price fluctuations in each city.

They were conducted where possible in large supermarkets, and covered the following foods: one pound each of sirloin-tip beef, all-beef wieners, centre-cut loin of pork, first grade chicken, ground chuck, frozen cod fillets, first-grade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, apples and drip coffee.

Also checked were the prices of one dozen medium eggs, a quart of homogenized milk, one 24-ounce loaf of sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, a 24-ounce can of firstgrade halved pears, and five pounds of white granulated sugar.

WINNIPEG—Prices for beef roast, beef hot dogs and pork roast all dropped a little. On July 30, pork roast was $1.98 a pound. It rose to $2.15 Aug. 13, and dropped to $1.88 Aug. 28. Beef roast went from $1.84 a pound to $1.98 and back to $1.87. Hot dogs rose from 88 cents a pound to $1.09 and dropped to 79 cents. Chicken increased from 59 cents a pound July 30 to 74 cents Aug. 28. Eggs went up steadily from 73 cents a dozen to 78 to 81 cents. Market basket total cost was $13.91.

EDMONTON—Beef roast has not dropped in price since it rose 20 cents a pound in mid-August. It was $1.79 a pound July 30, $1.99 on Aug. 13 and $1.99 Aug. 28. Chicken crept up from 67 cents a pound to 69 to 73, and eggs a dozen from 78 to 85. Tomatoes showed a seasonal drop in price from 59 cents a pound to 33 to 29. Market basket total cost was $14.02.

VANCOUVER—Ground chuck that cost 95 cents a pound on July 30 and $1.19 a pound Aug. 13 cost $1.39 Aug. 28. Hot dogs rose from $1.05 to $1.09 to $1.19. Only potatoes and tomatoes showed appreciable drops, potatoes from $1.18 for 10 pounds a month ago to 79 cents, and tomatoes from 54 cents a pound to 39 cents. Market basket total was $15.91.

Band Backs Cowichan Protest

Members of the Cowichan Indian Band at Duncan voted 43-22 at a special meeting Tuesday night to support a protest fish-in but the demonstration got away to a slow start today.

About 20 young people had gathered on the Cowichan River about a mile from its mouth by noon today but they were waiting for older band members to show them how to build a weir—a stake fence across the river guiding fish into a trap.

Weirs are illegal and the demonstrators intend their weir to bring their dispute with federal fisheries regulations to a head.

About mid-morning, four fisheries officers arrived at the young peoples' camp and a lengthy debate on the Indians' grievances began.

The protesters have announced that they want:

— Recognition of Indian rights to fish for food by any means and an end to harassment by fisheries officers.

— A federally-funded program to pay Indians for catching fish, together with a distribution system which would make the fish available to all band members.

— An investigation into the feasibility of building a hatchery on the Cowichan River.

The Cowichan Band Council last week dissociated itself from today's demonstration, saying it lacked sufficient preparation and could attract undesirables from elsewhere.

Gordon Elliott, 29, from the Quamicham Reserve at Duncan, is one of the organizers.

"I don't anticipate any need for violence unless the fisheries people come down and start beating us up and hauling us off to jail," he said today.

Other organizers are Joe Sylvester of the Cowichan Band and Larry Seymour, chief of the Chemainus Band.

Elliott said, that among demonstrators on hand today were people from Cache Creek, Bella Bella, Bella Coola, Lillooet and Nass River as well as Westholme, 10 miles north of Duncan.

Elliott said the demonstration will continue until the federal government "recognizes our total right to fish for food — and is ready to sit down and negotiate a realistic agreement."

Allende Tries 10th Cabinet In Three Years

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — President Salvador Allende, in a new move to pull Chile through its prolonged crisis, announced his 10th cabinet in less than three years after saying there will be "neither civil war nor a coup d'etat."

In a fighting speech, the Marxist leader vowed to continue his socialist revolution. Then he announced the cabinet reshuffle in a bid to retain support of the armed forces.

"I represent the revolutionary process of change which will not be halted by terror nor Fascist threats," the 65-year-old president said in a country-wide broadcast Tuesday night.

He then named the team to replace his "cabinet of national unity," which fell apart in less than three weeks.

His supporters were heartened by the fact that Allende managed to maintain a measure of military support, although his cabinet now contains only one of the four armed forces chiefs who joined the "unity" cabinet in the hope they would be able to end a truckers' strike and related unrest that has crippled the country for more than a month.

The chief of the para-military Carabineros police force, Gen. Jose Maria Sepulveda, retains the portfolio of lands and settlements he held in the previous cabinet.

The commanders of the army, navy and air force withdrew their overt support for the socialist president under pressure from fellow officers who alleged they were bringing the forces into disrepute by associating so closely with Allende.

But the president was able to persuade three lesser-ranking military men to join his new cabinet, keeping the forces representation at four out of 15.

He left his main political supporters, the Socialists and Communists, with three portfolios each and he brought a respected independent, Carlos Brione, in to head the key interior ministry.

Rain Dampens Fire Hazards

All forest fire restrictions have been cancelled in the province except in the Penticton watershed as the result of cooler weather and rain.

But fire hazards continue to range between medium to high on Vancouver Island and the mainland, a B.C. Forest Service official said today.

A total of 147 fires, including 12 new ones, are burning in the province. All are located in the interior and appear to have been caused by lightning, he said.

"Generally speaking the cooler nights are reducing fire hazards," he said. "But industrial operations are being cautious as hazardous conditions still exist."

On Vancouver Island logging operations are back to normal except in the B.C. Forest Products Koksilah and Muir Creek divisions where work has been stopped due to extreme dry conditions.

"Conditions are still hazardous," a company official said. "But things are expected to improve if the cool weather continues."

Quiet Campaign in Okanagan

From Victoria the South Okanagan byelection campaign appears to be much cooler than the weather which the valley has been experiencing. Progressive Conservative candidate Derril Warren created a brief flurry when he charged the Social Credit party with publicizing an election poll, something which is illegal in B.C. But by and large the campaign has made few headlines, despite the fact that the future of two provincial parties could be determined by the result.

Freshman Social Credit candidate William Bennett, son of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett, is tackling his father's old seat, and probably the Social Credit leadership if he is successful. A Social Credit failure in South Okanagan on September 7 would be a severe psychological setback for party faithful who are frequently told the movement is dead now that Mr. Bennett senior has bowed out.

That's the message Conservative Party Leader Derril Warren is trying to get across as he fights for his political future. If Mr. Warren fails on his second try for the legislature he will undoubtedly bow out as party leader, leaving hopes for a provincial Conservative renaissance in abeyance.

Other candidates include Liberal John Dyck, a Kelowna pharmacist; Bryan McIver, a full time organizer for the New Democratic party; Brian Sproule, representing the Communist party; and independent Kenneth Hasanen. With six candidates in the running, Mr. Warren and Mr. Bennett — the two prime contenders — might find themselves nosed out by a Liberal or New Democratic Party candidate if the voting were close. Such are the vagaries of politics.

It is impossible to speculate whether South Okanagan is ready for a change. The region's voters are going about their business of harvesting fruit while they watch burgeoning development eat away at orchard acreage. No doubt the pros and cons of the provincial government's Bill 42 — preserving farmland and green belts — will be a factor in such a rich agricultural area. Whatever the result, it will give the public a glimpse of future political winds in this province as well as being the first test of the NDP since it was elected to power last August.

". . . but the Foothills Accumulative You Know Rococo Compost Shareholders are supposed to be pressing in Studio Six . . . how did the Maritimes' Golden Sound Authoritarian Found-Object Filing System get in there . . .?"

Eating Up B.C.'s Future

The high price of alfalfa hay is the main reason that milk will leap another two cents says Provincial Agriculture Minister David Stupich. But the dairy industry's long chain of buying and selling of little concern to the housewife. She sees the price increasing every few months in the supermarket to the current point where one quart of homogenized milk costs 43 cents. She may also know that Prairie housewives pay 10 cents less for the same quart of milk.

British Columbians can always expect to pay a little more for their dairy products, because, as the agricultural economists say, we live in a milk deficient area which means we don't produce enough to satisfy demand. B.C. milk production in 1973 may be less than last year's total, according to provincial statistics. And as Mr. Stupich warns, eventually the question may not revolve around rising prices, but rather whether sufficient milk will be available at any price. In 1971 there were 1,557 dairy farms producing for the fluid market in B.C. and the department of agriculture says that it was part of a "long term downward trend."

But it is not enough to cry over spilled milk. Less than five per cent of B.C. is classed as arable land and farm production is declining. In 1966 the Okanagan Valley produced 52,000 tons of fruit; this year the total is only 30,000 tons. Kootenay Valley vegetable production is only 10 per cent of what it was two decades ago. What are the reasons for the decline?

As one B.C. Tree Fruits official puts it: wherever you can grow fruit it is also a nice place to live. One has only to glance at the urban sprawl that has eaten up the Fraser Valley and parts of the Saanich Peninsula to understand that statement. B.C. farmers are also faced with some of the highest labor costs in North America. Production costs alone discourage many farmers who find it easier to sell out and move to the city.

The New Democratic Party government recognized the trend and is trying to halt the farm land erosion by Bill 42 which is designed to preserve agricultural land. But the bill was awkwardly handled and watered down. Nor is it the complete answer to a problem that will plague the province as long as the Rocky mountains exist.

Long term trends show increasing population and less raw produce in B.C. Without more safeguards now, cost may be a secondary consideration in the future when all those sprawling duplexes, townhouses and apartments contain empty kitchen shelves.

PAUL WHITELAW

A Contrast in Wage Demands

Development of labor unrest, crippling strikes, inflationary wage demands and settlements have been front page news in Canada this summer. Yet, down in the United States — despite the highest peacetime inflation in the modern history of the country — unions have shown a remarkable restraint in accepting modest wage increases.

What is the reason for this extraordinary contrast between organized labor in the two countries? Can it, and will it continue?

Now that America's biggest union, the Teamsters, has signed with the American trucking industry, most of this year's major labor contracts have been negotiated and the pattern of wage settlements seems to be definitely established. It is uniformly moderate. The Teamsters' contract calls for annual increases in wages and benefits of only 6.1 per cent.

Unusual Restraint

This is well in line with the other new contracts in such major fields as rubber, oil and the garment industry, where wage increases have ranged from six to seven percent, all pretty well close to the U.S. government's guidelines.

But why this unusual restraint when the cost of living in the U.S. is soaring? Most of the contracts were negotiated in the second quarter of 1973, when the Consumer Price Index was shooting up at an annual rate of 8.7 per cent.

Arthur Okun, a highly-regarded economist at the Brookings Institution, now says: "There is no question that labor has gotten the short end of the stick in the last six months, although it has not necessarily been by design."

Dr. Okun is a former chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers.

Many explanations have been offered for the serenity of the American labor front. But the one which seems to get most of the heart of the matter is that American unions are recovering from the wage binge that went on during the late 1960s.

Before the new contract, Teamsters paid by the hour were averaging $6 an hour, while those paid by the mile were getting 12.5 cents a mile. That means that many truck drivers were already earning between $20,000 and $25,000 a year. That put them on a par with a lot of construction workers, who, until the imposition of wage-price controls here in 1971, were getting wages higher by 15 per cent or more.

GEORGE MEANY
. . . recognizes facts

Although few union leaders will admit it publicly, President Nixon's decision to impose controls was a godsend to them. During the years leading up to the controls, the rank and file of many unions, encouraged by ambitious candidates for union office, made life hell for the established labor leaders.

Workers regularly rejected settlements negotiated by their leaders, no matter how plush they were. The leaders, fearing the loss of their jobs, were forced to go back and fight for still better terms, often with success.

The controls broke this trend, and gave union executives a breathing spell. While denouncing publically President Nixon's wage policies, many labor leaders—like AFL-CIO President George Meany—know they would be in serious trouble with their constituents if the current guidelines were entirely abandoned.

There is a begrudging acceptance that wage increases unrelated to increases in productivity add up simply to more inflation, and that industry in the U.S. can no longer absorb the huge contract settlements that were possible during the boom years of the Vietnam war. The last thing the labor leaders want, then, is to be put on the spot once more by an unruly, sky-is-the-limit rank and file.

Shaky Labor Peace

However, many labor experts agree that the current labor peace in the United States is only slightly more stable than the peace pact in Vietnam. Should acute inflation persist, despite the moderating effect of Phase Four, American union members may begin to echo the inflated wage demands of Canadian workers.

The stark contrast between the tranquil labor climate in the United States and the strikes, inflationary wage settlements and disruption of essential services in Canada this summer has little to do with the magnanimity of American unionists. Canadian labor leaders not only cannot pacify their constituents by pointing to wage-price guidelines, they know that few of their demands are likely to be checked by a government which depends for its existence on the union-financed New Democratic Party.

JAMES RESTON

Odd and a Little Frightening

WASHINGTON — The Government of the United States has often been described as a kind of organized disorder, but lately the normal confusion has declined into an illogical and sometimes even into an irrational babble of astonishing contradictions.

A few days ago, President Nixon was appealing to the nation over TV to forget the past and settle down to the positive programs of the future, but later in New Orleans he raked over all the old arguments of the war, engaged in an angry shoving match on TV with his own press secretary, and fussed with his own Secret Service for taking prudent precautions to protect his life.

Instead of settling down, Nixon seems to be getting more restless, frustrated, and separated from his office and even from the rest of his administration. Lately he has been secluded on his mountain top at Camp David more than at the White House.

Restless President

When he finished his latest report to the people, he flew off to his house in Florida for the weekend, took off for New Orleans to address the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and then went to his house in San Clemente to stay for a couple of weeks.

Meanwhile, in his absence, we have a public row between Vice President Agnew and Attorney General Elliot Richardson, with the Vice President accusing the Department of Justice of trying to indict and convict him in the press and demanding on TV that Richardson put Justice Department officials under oath to discover the source of the leaks.

The atmosphere now is poisonous with rumors that Nixon's people leaked the news that Agnew was being investigated for criminal activity in order to divert attention from the Watergate to the Vice President, and even that the alleged assassination conspiracy in New Orleans was blown up in order to create public sympathy for the President.

The President's last two speeches illustrate confusion of thought and purpose. In the first, the President concluded with a plea to the people for understanding, for rededication to "the principles of decency, honor and respect for our institutions," and for a commitment by all of us to show a renewed respect for the mutual restraints that are the mark of a free and a civilized society."

But less than a week later, after condemning those who put their ends ahead of their means, he was proclaiming that his objective of peace justified the bombing of Cambodia and keeping this secret from the American people. And while calling for a new spirit of conciliation at home, he was attacking those who criticized his policies and asserting that he was not only right in the secret bombing but that he would do it all over again in the same circumstances.

PRESIDENT NIXON
. . . illogical babble

He simply dismisses the protests against the bombing by saying they are "absurd" and defends the secrecy by saying the bombings were disclosed, not to the leaders of Congress, but to "the appropriate Congressional leaders," meaning those who favored his policies.

He sees no conflict in this with his statement in the TV speech that the abuses of Watergate "resulted from the assumption by those involved that their cause placed them beyond the reach of those rules that apply to other persons . . ."

No conflict in his refusal to hand over any incriminating evidence out of the Watergate tapes with his statement "far from trying to hide the facts, my effort throughout has been to discover the facts and to lay those facts before the appropriate law enforcement authorities . . ."

No conflict in his appeal for "confidentiality" with the admitted fact that he was bugging the conversations of his visitors without their knowledge, no conflict in his appeal for privacy in the relations between lawyer and client, priest and penitent, husband and wife with the violation of that privacy in the burglarizing of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's files.

"The time has come to turn Watergate over to the courts," he says, because "a continued backward-looking obsession with Watergate is causing this nation to neglect matters of far greater importance to all the American people."

This may be true if it is affecting the emotions and logic of the President, but the fact is that Watergate is not responsible for the price of beef, the state of the dollar, or the conduct of our foreign policy. In fact, in his New Orleans speech he took credit, and fair enough, for bringing peace and composing major controversies with the Chinese and the Russians. Despite Watergate, he could say: "It's a good time, a good time."

Nixon Mentality

It is easy to say, and understandable enough, that many people are sick of Watergate and all this contention, but the main point is that the mentality that conducted the war and produced Watergate is still with us.

The President is still asserting that the Ervin committee and the critics are "increasingly absorbed in trying to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place" and that others unnamed are trying to "exploit Watergate in order to keep us from doing what we were elected to do . . ."

In one speech he plays the role of the great conciliator, calling for forgetfulness of the past, and in the next he is a glory merchant, forgetting nothing and forgiving nothing. It is all very odd, and even a little frightening.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Good Question

When the government admits to having a pistol at its head, who governs?—G. Gardner, 7090 Brentwood Drive.

Urges Polish

Many an old soldier will echo the sentiments of Irene Baird about the disgraceful condition of the harness that is draped over the weary and neglected-looking work horses that drag the tally-hos around Victoria. An old sergeant-major would fairly itch to run the drivers in for first field punishment and pack-drill. They seem never to have heard of brasso, nor of good soft soap for harness leather.

Even if the proprietors of this little gold mine lack self-respect as regards their untidy equipages, they might at least think twice about exposing their shabby turn-outs to the gaze of thousands of visitors at the very portals of Victoria. Perchance the licensing authority may yet bestir itself and bring something to bear on these eyesores? — C. K. Morison, Ex-mule skinner, First World War.

Added Attraction

In the August 15 edition of Victoria Times, Page 29, you have a little article about whether or not housewives should be paid for working at home. Here is my answer to the question:

She was a farmer's wife . . . But taken from the knowledgeable "Farm Journal", a magazine put out for Canada's agriculturists — a farmer's wife is worth $150 a week to him. Broken down according to the chores she performs, her value adds up to this: 15.4 hours a week as cook, at a rate of $2.50 per hour, $38.50; 10.9 hours as a governess, at an hourly pay of $2.30, $25.07; 8.4 hours working as a farmer, rated at $1.60 per hour, $13.44; plus her various duties as housekeeper, dishwasher, laundress, tailor, chauffeur and bookkeeper. In the Farm Journal's estimate of the farmer's wife's worth, not one mention was made of her entertainment value. — Sam Armstrong, Royal Jubilee Hospital, Ward S.

Gaelophones

The current issue of "Time" magazine reports that the CBC has forbidden the use of Gaelic for Gaelic-speaking listeners over a local radio station in Nova Scotia.

The Scots are as much a founding race as any other in Canada. If francophones base their right to a radio program in B.C. on the fact that they are a founding race, the Gaelic Scots have as good a claim, at least in Nova Scotia, where their proportion in numbers is far greater than the francophone population in B.C.

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander and if the CBC management doesn't want to recognize this principle it should be replaced. — S. R. Forrest, 417-2100 Granite St.

Alternative

I see from recent press reports that a shortage of coinage is feared as a result of the rail strikes holding up shipments, and because it is too expensive to ship by air.

Have those concerned forgotten that we have trucks in this country? What is the matter with using them? The cost would be a lot less than shipping by air. Not only this, maybe they would discover a more efficient and cheaper way for the future so that they would not need to use the trains again even after they do go back to work. — Harold Morton, P.O. Box 4223.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of August 29, 1913

That Dr. Stefansson only spent three days among the blonde Eskimos after being sent word of their discovery, is the claim that G. L. Deschambeault, a noted northern trapper, made in Edmonton yesterday with the finding of the blonde Eskimos. Three summers ago, Mr. Deschambeault, who makes his headquarters at Fort Simpson, a post 1,000 miles due north of Edmonton, left on a hunting trip with the two Hudson brothers, also well-known northern trappers, for the unexplored country lying around Great Bear Lake, which lies within 150 miles of the Arctic Ocean. At the junction of the Coppermine River and Great Bear Lake they came upon an encampment of the blonde Eskimos about 300 in number.

Chile: Another Spanish Civil War?

NEW STATESMAN
An Editorial

When President Allende formed the first parliamentary socialist administration in South America three years ago, it became open season for all his internal and external enemies to defy the "democratic rules" for which they normally demand respect.

From the squalid alliance of ITT money and CIA know-how (only just nipped in the bud), to the covert organization of a fascist brigade in Chile itself (with the predictable name of "Fatherland and Freedom"), no holds have been barred to defend Mr. Nixon's own new variation of the Monroe Doctrine.

Indeed, but for Watergate, might not a Pentagon — which can apparently submit Cambodia to secret carpet bombing — have chosen a military solution to the Chilean question as well? It is still unclear whether Colonel Souper and his tanks were acting unilaterally in their attempted coup of last June.

On a more open front, the blockade of credit and loan facilities for Santiago has gone hand in hand with an attempt to prevent Chilean copper being legitimately exported, and it may be as well to recall here that the bill nationalizing copper received a unanimous vote in a Congress where President Allende's coalition is in a minority.

But in countries dominated by U.S. fiat anyone is an enemy who wishes to restore natural resources to the ownership of the nation. And during the lifetime of the Allende government two nearby countries have learned this the hard way. Both Bolivia and Uruguay have experienced military takeover, with an accompanying reign of terror, resulting in the sort of "stability" which Nixonism can stomach.

The politics of the Popular Unity coalition are not always to the taste of socialists. Military cabinets are seldom if ever the best guarantors of democracy or social change. But when The (London) Times speaks of a "Chilean risk" and thunders about "a minority party of Marxist views with a program destructive to prosperity and freedom" it is time to ensure that things are called by their proper names. To begin with, the Allende government is not the first in Chilean history to hold power on a minority vote. It simply got more support than any other political group at the polls, and for the good reason that Christian Democracy had proved wholly powerless to satisfy the expectations it had fostered. Its international debts saddle Chile to this day.

Second, despite its compromises with the military, Chile is the least gun-governed major state in the Latin American continent. Those who are really worried about the "destruction of freedom" as opposed simply to being scared of socialism should look a little closer at the "Western democracies" of Brazil, Paraguay or Venezuela, as well as at the Bolivian and Uruguayan collapse into despotism. Thirdly and finally it is a mattter of fact that at every local and national election since he took office, President Allende has increased his percentage of the vote, and still commands the allegiance of the mass of underprivileged citizens who can expect help from no other parliamentary quarter.

It may well be that there is no peaceful road to socialism in South America: if so, the United States and her domestic nominees are going the right way to prove it.

The attitude of British politicians has been predictably feeble. Rather than seize the opportunities presented by this new opening in the underdeveloped world, as many Continental countries have done, they have been content to look on impotently — apparently still regarding the whole of Latin America as an exclusive sphere of U.S. influence.

Even with its sister party under vicious attack from the forces of privilege, British Labor still seems to prefer "non-intervention," though a few more imaginative trade union leaders have taken up the call for a campaign of solidarity.

The phase "non-intervention" may yet prove all too apt. Without overstraining the parallel the image of a weakened Centre-Left government, subjected to economic warfare and right-wing provocation, with powerful foreign enemies encouraging the strife, became all-too-familiar to the radicals of an earlier generation as they watched the destruction of the Spanish Republic. That experience should never be repeated. Even though the enemy today is more insidious, it is no less barbaric, and the proof of that is written only too plainly elsewhere in Latin America.

New Pioneers Of the North

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

SMITHERS — As if nothing in this world could be new, the ranchers and farmers along the Central Transprovincial Highway are turning forest into farmland with what seems to be desperate haste. From Prince George through Vanderhoof to Smithers the poplar groves are going down and being swept into long windrows of grey sticks to be burned and the soil is being given over to the cultivated crops, mostly tame hay.

Perhaps they're late. When Charles M. Hayes was pushing the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through this country before drowning in the Titanic disaster, this region was to become another agricultural belt of B.C. After that war, many veterans took their settlements here.

The story is as old as Canada. The early French settlers were granted strips of land along the St. Lawrence and invited to take the axe to them and tame them.

The same program was offered to United Empire Loyalists and to veterans of Napoleonic wars. The Scottish highlanders were imported to the Red River Colony and the Irish potato famine refugees to the north shores of the Ottawa River. In this century Sir Clifford Sifton was a guiding spirit in bringing multitudes of people from Poland, the Ukraine and other East European regions to break the untended sod of the Canadian prairies.

★ ★ ★

Not all the experiments worked. On both the Ontario and Quebec sides of the Ottawa River, governments now are engaged in attracting people away from their small, rocky pieces of farmland and turning the land back to forest — plantations, as they are called.

The original impulse to plow soil has been revived on the Central Transprovincial. Not much land comes from government any more and the free grant to settlers is gone. But private lands continue to trade and land clearing gets provincial government support to the extent that money for it is loaned to bona fide people at four per cent interest.

Since portions of old Eastern Canada have reached the conclusion that some farms should never have been created, what is the long-term prospect of these new agricultural lands being created in B.C.'s midriff?

We could leave the long term forecasts to economists, who know everything, being paid salaries by other people. What are the immediate economic realities?

Let us take a report from a cattleman in the Smithers area who says he's a usual sort of man except possibly more cautious or lucky than others.

★ ★ ★

This man brought one of the old farms on the rolling hills above Smithers. Some of it was cleared, much of it was in poplar, a tree that gives optimistic evidence of good soil. The cleared land sells here for $200 to $250 per acre.

Each year he clears more acres. He hires someone to walk the trees down with a Cat of minimum size — 7E to 8. A good Cat man will walk down poplars and pile them for about $60 an acre, if he's a Cat operator, he won't take away too much of the topsoil with the trees but will leave a burnable line of dead trees across the landscape.

He plows the newly cleared land and plants it for the first year in oats or some other cereal crop, grown for animal feed only. Then he will sow tame hay, timothy, clover, brome and some alfalfa which will continue to renew itself for five or six years before it requires another plowing, harrowing and planting.

From these hayfields, he is harvesting this year a little less than two tons of hay to the acre. In a year such as this, it's all gold. There's a panic about hay crops and prices of $70 to $80 a ton are quoted frequently.

He believes himself to be intensely realistic. He does not think he is rearranging the rocks in the style of the Ottawa Valley pioneers. He intends to keep on clearing land.

U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT NEEDS STRENGTHENING

A New Look Is Coming to Foggy Bottom

By JAMES EAYRS

The two most talked-about buildings in Washington today, only a few hundred yards apart, are the Watergate and the Department of State — talked about in that order. President Nixon would like to abate all Watergate scuttlebutt, but if he can't do that at least to reverse the order. That is what his appointment of Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State is intended to bring about.

The new philosopher king of Foggy Bottom, with his highly developed taste for paradox and irony — "a contradictory outcome of events as if in mockery of the promise and fitness of things" — will relish more than anyone that the first tangible impact of the muck of Watergate upon American government is his chance to restore dignity, authority and power to a State Department enfeebled after long decline.

KISSINGER . . . nothing to fear

Jefferson First

Just how far it's fallen from its former grace and favor may be shown by recalling that the first to be placed in charge of it was Thomas Jefferson. Each of the three next U.S. presidents after Jefferson, Monroe and John Quincy Adams — had previously served as Secretary of State.

Thereafter the secretaryship was the culmination of a career rather than an entrance to the White House. But it remained for many decades a culmination carrying immense prestige.

Cordell Hull, who under Franklin Roosevelt held the office longer than any incumbent before or since, was said to have been "the one man in public life who could give the president substantial concern by threatening, in a basic disagreement, to resign." While Hull's stature derived in part from his image as the very model of Roman rectitude — "the saint in blue serge" became his sobriquet — it is doubtful that he would have commanded comparable influence as, say, Secretary of Agriculture or of Labor.

For the office has no rival, in the cabinet or out. The Secretary of State is first among equals. He is in the line of presidential succession. "The most dignified place in the cabinet is that of the Secretary of State," wrote James Bryce in his magnum opus on the American Commonwealth, and almost a century later Louis Heren's The New American Commonwealth employs (surely not by accident) the same expression: "His is a position of great dignity."

Stoic Suffering

Yet "dignity" does not come immediately to mind as aptly associated with the office during recent years — except for the dignity of suffering stoically upon a voyage of humiliation.

A proper balance of authority between the president and his senior cabinet appointee is as rare as it is precarious. Of modern presidents, only one has managed to achieve it — and even he ran through a couple of Secretaries of State (the lightweight Stettinius inherited from Roosevelt, the insufferable Byrnes with whom relations were soured by what his daughter describes as "Mr. Byrnes' low opinion of Harry Truman and his extravagantly high opinion of himself") before reaching an admirable equilibrium with General Marshall and, after Marshall, Dean Acheson.

But these are exceptions to what seems to be almost a rule prescribing discord or disharmony between Mr. President and Mr. Secretary.

The team of Eisenhower and Dulles is the classic case of disharmony. Ike allowed his Secretary of State so much scope and power that Dulles became, in effect, a surrogate president — doing more harm (notably by damaging his own department) than good.

The team of Kennedy and Rusk is the classic case of discord. A State Department in-house report prepared for Secretary Rogers savages Dean Rusk's reputation: "The makeup of his personality prevented him from actually encouraging creative controversy, taking firm stands, and then arguing them through in the highest counsels. The secretary did not welcome dissent on the Vietnam issue and had little time to encourage creative thinking on others." All too sadly true.

Yet the fault was as much Kennedy's as Rusk's. Egged on by J. K. Galbraith, who unforgiveably smeared his superior when U.S. ambassador to India in private correspondence with the president ("If the State Department drives you crazy, you might calm yourself by contemplating its effect on me. The other night I woke with a blissful feeling and discovered I had been dreaming that the whole goddam place had burned down. I dozed off again hoping for a headline saying 'No survivors'."), Kennedy distrusted Rusk, ignored him, hoped to fire him; Rusk responded as one might expect anyone so treated to respond.

As if being eclipsed by presidents were not enough, recent secretaries of state have had their traditional prerogatives usurped by upstart bureaucrats within the White House Staff, notably by the holder of the office of Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs.

Down the Hall

As is often the case with bureaucracy, the more modest the title, the greater the power. The special assistant is director of the National Security Council. He has been well described as "the President's Secretary of State when the president is acting as Secretary of State" — a description which would baffle the Founding Fathers but is no less accurate for that.

He has the advantage of proximity — down the hall or in the basement — whereas the Secretary of State must summon a limousine. (Assuming that the Secretary can get an appointment, which lately was not to be assumed.) He is the pivot for intelligence. Across his desk pass the top secret papers of all the government's departments and agencies. "He is more intimately aware of defense questions than is the Secretary of State," a knowledgable White House observer has written, "and of diplomatic questions than is the Secretary of Defence."

Endorsement

Upon such a paragon what president would not rely? President Kennedy relied on McGeorge Bundy, President Johnson on W. W. Rostow, President Nixon on Henry Kissinger. And none more heavily than Nixon on Kissinger. The man whom Kissinger had pronounced to lack sufficient intellect to be president found his intellect in Kissinger. Or what passed for intellect: as its possessor observed during a previous incarnation, "what the policy-maker wants from the intellectual is not ideas but endorsement."

The circumstances for a restoration of the dignity, authority and power to the Secretaryship of State and State Department could thus not be more propitious. Kissinger commands presidential trust and respect. He has nothing to fear from a rival Special Assistant on National Security, since he retains that office with his new one.

All that remains to be seen is whether Mr. Secretaty Kissinger will be able to contrive a harmonious relationship with his president, as did his predecessors Marshall and Acheson; or whether, like Dulles under Eisenhower, he will create a surrogate presidency with all of its power and much of its glory — or its infamy.

Getting High on Highs

By JOHN NICHOL

As an unashamed and fanatical British Columbian, I tell every stranger I meet that the B.C. Coast in the summer is something he should experience before he gets too old.

The weather on the West Coast is controlled by the great air masses that surge up out of the deep Pacific. There is a wonderful meteorological phenomenon called the Pacific High. When the High is behaving itself, it is a high-pressure area that reaches from the Alaska Panhandle, down the B.C. Coast and off across the sea beyond Hawaii.

When the High is on the Coast, the wind blows from the northwest, and the clear skies of the Pacific move in. That is when you get the storybook climate — the warm days and the cool bright nights. The flags snap in the wind, and in the twilight the freighters swing at anchor in the harbors. Who knows where the ships come from or where they go. They leave white wakes across the gulf.

Downtown in Vancouver the streets are jammed with tourists' cars with exotic plates from faraway places — from Illinois, Arizona, New York, Hawaii, California and Alberta, and the drivers peer out the windows trying to figure out the traffic signs. Across the inlet the mountains loom through the haze.

Ninety miles away in Victoria, the tourists mill in droves, ablaze with Bermuda shorts and hung with cameras. There are boats tied up in the harbor, and the crews working or smoking in the morning sun stare back at the tourists who peer at them over the sea wall. The sea is blue, the grass is green, and the tourists' shirts are white, yellow and red and the west wind blows through it all. There is a feeling that the world is good, the air is clean, and tomorrow is someone else's problem.

Then, when the weather has been good for a long time, a strange still comes in the air. There is no west wind. The sun is too hot. The smoke from the mills collects in the sky and you can tell that a change is coming.

The wind shifts and begins to puff from the southeast. The Pacific High is leaving. Then overnight everything changes. The southeasterly blows — gusty and unpleasant. It brings low cloud — moving fast against the hills. And then comes the rain — sucked out of the ocean a thousand miles away off toward Honolulu.

The freighters swing round on their moorings, and the tourists dig out their plastic raincoats. The kids get bored as their parents idle in the restaurants, wondering why they came so far to sit in the muck. The tug boats kennel up behind the islands.

But in the summer it doesn't last long. The radio crackles from the weather ship out in the Gulf of Alaska. The High is coming back. Fresh westerly winds. Small craft warning in effect. And then the flags begin to snap again.

Next day the streets are dry. The stop lights swing in the intersections, and the sidewalks are alive with people heading for work in the best of all possible worlds.

There are wonderful sensations to be had in Canada. October in Gatineau Park when the leaves turn. Spring on the Prairie with the black dirt and the incredible green grass. Winter in Quebec City with the sky iron blue and the St. Lawrence blazing with ice. St. John's, Newfoundland, in June — with the bergs in the harbor mouth.

But — Canada's Pacific Coast in the summer! That's a sight to make a strong man cry!

Refinery at Prince Rupert Doesn't Excite Imperial Oil

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A provincial government proposal for an oil refinery at Prince Rupert makes no economic sense unless the sole objective of the project is to create jobs, Imperial Oil British Columbia corporate manager Clifford Goddard said today.

He said gasoline from a small Prince Rupert refinery would cost much more than the product currently refined on the lower mainland and shipped by tanker to Rupert.

He said Imperial Oil was not interested in the project and doubted that any other company would be because of the expense.

The provincial department of Industrial development, trade and commerce Tuesday released an economic report on the Skeena-Queen Charlottes area which included a recommendation for a refinery at Prince Rupert.

The report said Prince Rupert could support a refinery with a rated capacity of 5,000 barrels or 175,000 gallons per day.

By contrast, the Imperial Oil refinery at Ioco on Burrard Inlet has a rated capacity of 34,500 barrels or 1.2 million gallons per day. The product includes a range of petroleum goods from jet and diesel fuels and gasolines to heavy fuels and asphalt.

The government report said a refinery at Prince Rupert would provide employment for 40 people and an annual payroll of $400,000.

Goddard conceded a refinery would boost the economy of the region but said it would be an expensive project for the relatively small number of jobs that would result.

In addition the cost of gasoline and other products would increase in that area.

Because of transportation costs, gasoline already is about 5 cents more per gallon in the Prince Rupert region than in Victoria.

Goddard said the trend is towards large centrally-located refineries involving longer distances for distribution of products.

U.S. Would Shuffle IMF Management

By HOBART ROWEN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration is pressing for changes at the top of the International Monetary Fund hierarchy that would bring "suitable people from home governments who have political stature and responsibility" into the policy-making process.

This is made clear by an official position paper, released over the weekend by the treasury, summarizing U.S. views on major international monetary reform issues.

The 120 governments involved are scheduled to come to grips with these issues at the IMF annual meeting next month in Nairobi, Kenya.

For the most part, the treasury paper restated U.S. attitudes as they have developed in the past year, starting with a major initiative by Secretary George Shultz at the 1972 IMF annual meeting, and continuing in sessions of the special Committee of Twenty, created to find technical answers to pressing monetary problems.

The urgency of reform has been underscored by a series of crises and the scrapping of the old Bretton Woods system, calling for fixed exchange rates, at the height of speculation against the dollar last March.

Most currencies are now "floating" individually or jointly, and the present direction of the reform movement is to find a new code of conduct without going back to the Bretton Woods rigidities.

On restructuring the IMF itself, the treasury paper reflected the U.S. view that in recent years, the IMF has been run largely its staff, and a managing director who basically is an international civil servant.

"A strengthening of the basic rules of the system," the treasury document said, "will provide more effective international discipline. The more clearly these are agreed . . . the more effective can the Fund be as the custodian of the system . . .

"Second, as any code of conduct will require judgment in application involving important and senstive policy decisions, the Fund should be strengthened by providing an input from, and the assistance of" men with political stature.

Among ways of bringing finance ministers and central bank heads directly into the IMF management, the treasury said, would be a new or revamped executive committee, or continuation of the C-20, on which they are represented.

"The goal would be to have senior and politically responsible figures, at the deputies (-to-ministers) level, and possibly also at the ministers' level, meet periodically in a group much smaller than the annual meeting of 120 governors," the treasury said.

It was added that there has been no extensive discussion of this matter in the C-20.

On other key issues, there was only the briefest discussion of the problem of the huge dollar overhang, indicating that "consolidating" or "funding" of outstanding balances — estimated at around $90 billion remains one of the sticky problems.

The paper said that the United States feels that the "question of past accurals of currency balances is secondary to the need to develop a satisfactory system of adjustment for the future."

But the United States agrees that "some means of dealing with part of these balances may be desirable from the viewpoint of the system as a whole, and such proposals should receive careful study."

Reliable sources indicate that the United States, during last month's C-20 meeting in Washington, suggested a multilateral funding through the IMF. But many other nations, fearing that this would result in a massive and inflationary issue of Special Drawing Rights, want the United States to buy back some of its dollars out of trade surpluses.

The paper reiterates Shultz's suggestions that a reformed system should provide symmetrical responsibility for both surplus and deficit countries to restore their balance of payments accounts, using the level of reserves to signal "a strong presumption" that adjustment action is needed.

But in an effort to be conciliatory, the paper stresses that "the indicator system would not be automatic," because the international community "would have authority to 'override' the indicator in case it was judged to be wrong."

European nations, by and large, have argued that the indicators should merely point to the need for greater consultation. To this, the treasury paper says: "We do not believe that a system placing such heavy reliance on the consultative process is workable or desirable."

The treasury paper takes a strong stand against the "SDR-aid link," although it acknowledges that there is great pressure for providing more development assistance through the SDR mechanism. Some American officials say privately they may not be able to cling to this position for too long after the Nairobi meeting.

Muggings Drop

LONDON (AP) — The number of muggings in London dropped by 31 per cent in the second quarter of 1973, Scotland Yard said. A yard spokesman attributed the sharp decline to stiffer sentences for mugging and to the work of the yard's anti-mugging squads.

BLACK GUERRILLAS EXECUTE TEACHER

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Black African guerrillas forced three school teachers to stand in line and watch as they beat a headmaster to death at a black-only school in northeastern Rhodesia on Saturday night, reliable sources here reported Tuesday.

The sources said five guerrillas entered the Mangare school in the Kandeya tribal trust land near Mount Darwin and dragged the hedamaster, named Chipara, from his home.

After forcing him to hand over books and money, they lined up three teachers — one of them the headmaster's younger brother — and beat Chipara to death.

The three teachers were then released unharmed.

The Kandeya area lies in a broad strip of tribal trust land between white-owned farming areas and the Mozambique border. Guerrilla activity has centred on this part of the country in recent months.

Killer Wind Claims 4

WEST STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Work began today to clear away debris and survey damage caused bya tornado that ripped through eastern New York and western Massachusetts Tuesday, killing four persons and injuring 31 others.

The twister levelled the State Line Diner at the Berkshire Truck Plaza here.

Two diners, Robert Hoag, 56, of New Hartford, N.Y., and Louis J. Pascale, 28, of suffered when the storm hit Brooklyn, N.Y., were killed, state police said. A West Stockbridge man, Constantine Belmolino, 37, died of injuries suffered when the storm hit his home about half a mile from the diner. A fourth victim, a man, was not identified.

Keith Loveless of Stockbridge, who was eating at the diner when the storm hit, said a group of customers had clustered at the door to watch the heavy downpour.

"I heard a snap and looked up and saw the whole roof divide down the middle and blow off," Loveless said.

A number of homes in the area received heavy damage, especially to rooftops.

The tornado apparently struck the Berkshire Farm for Boys in Canaan, N.Y., about 15 minutes before moving into West Stockbridge.

Donald J. Cox, assistant executive director of the farm, estimated damage at $250,000 but said none of the farm's 225 residents was injured.

Mercedes Benz 450 SE

"This car has reached a technical level close to the limit of what can be done today in standard automobile engineering."
R. M. Lange-Mechlen

Remarkable as some may think it, the 450SE is being bought almost as rapidly as it can be shipped from Stuttgart. Here are some of the reasons.

1. Even better handling. An entirely new front-suspension proved out on our 180 mph C-111 prototype further minimizes the risk of swerves and skids. The sense of control is uncanny.

2. Fuel-injected engine with electronic fuel metering, transistorised ignition, and disc brakes give this 2-ton sedan the performance of a sports car.

3. Standard fitments include stereo AM/FM radio; superb air-conditioning; anatomically designed seats; 40 lbs of paint, undercoating; central locking system; Mercedes-Benz engineering.

A very limited number of Mercedes-Benz 450SE's are available at our showrooms now. We suggest you contact us soon.

Nothing Sloppy in This Kiss

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — When Scott kissed Liz Tuesday night before a cheering crowd of 200, he wasn't trying to win her heart — he was trying to impress Mae West.

Scott Sandler and Liz Shapiro, both UCLA students, puckered up for 35 seconds to win a sterling silver loving cup with Mae West's signature engraved on it.

The kiss, described by an onlooker as "passionate because it was so disorganized," won the first annual UCLA Romeo and Juliet Kissing Contest. Mae West, the sole judge of the contest, selected the couple by crowd reaction.

The four couples involved were judged on five points — beauty of embrace, position of lips, breath and noise control, inventiveness and sex appeal.

NEW YORK — Abbie Hoffman, a Chicago Seven defendant and founder of the Youth International Party (Yippies), was jailed Tuesday night on charges of trying to sell $500,000 worth of cocaine.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Barbara Eden filed a petition Tuesday seeking a divorce from actor Michael Ansara, her husband for 15 years.

Miss Eden, 35, sought custody of her son Matthew, seven, as well as child support and alimony from Ansara, 40.

She starred in television's I Dream of Jeannie series.

MANILA — Margarita Moran, the 1973 Miss Universe who said Richard Nixon is "the world's greatest man," has received a letter from the president thanking her for her "thoughtful comment on my efforts to bring peace in the world."

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Dixie Blandy, 70, a 45-year veteran of the flagpole-sitting fad of the 1920s and 1930s, is at it again.

He mounted a 50-foot pole in suburban Depew Monday and says he will stay there until Labor Day. Blandy is seated comfortably in a 19-inch steel chair fastened to the top of the pole.

LOS ANGELES — Comedian Groucho Marx, 82, has been in hospital for a week for what a member of his staff said is a regular check-up.

His secretary, Erin Fleming, said Marx, last surviving member of the famed Marx Brothers slapstick trio, has been given a clean bill of health and will be coming out of hospital in two days.

NEW YORK — Comedian Soupy Sales filed a $100,000 breach of contract suit against the producer of the television presentation of the play "Hellza Poppin" Tuesday.

The suit accuses Alexander H. Cohen of breaking a 1967 agreement with Sales to offer the comedian first choice in starring in any of Cohen's productions. Sales said Cohen failed to offer him the starring role in the TV production.

WASHINGTON — Comedian Dick Gregory and seven other peace activists were acquitted Tuesday of charges of illegal entry and unlawful assembly for praying at the White House before the Cambodian bombing halt.

Superior Court Judge Charles Halleck ruled that the White House was a public place and that the defendants had stopped only briefly to kneel and pray without obstructing traffic.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — The globetrotting Henry Kissinger is going to stay at home while he waits to be confirmed as secretary of state.

Kissinger will not make overseas trips pending his confirmation by the Senate, Deputy White House press secretary Gerald Warren said Tuesday. Warren said Kissinger is busy preparing for his assumption of command of the state department.

FISH LOSE LURE AFTER HANGING

GOODING, Idaho (UPI) — Lester Hoover may give up fishing after hanging by his heel for several hours over a Snake River waterfall.

Hoover, 75, San Leandro, Calif., said from his hospital bed Tuesday that he was wading in the shallw stream trying to hook his second fish when he slipped.

"My foot went into a hole and I fell. I hung over the fall and my foot didn't come out of that groove. It was a miracle how that leg held out," Hoover said.

The elderly man said he passed out and doesn't know how long he dangled over the 20-foot fall Monday before rescuers found him.

Robert Johnson, one of the rescuers, said Hoover was hanging with head down and his back in the eight-inch fall of water at Cavanaugh Rapids in Hagerman Valley.

Hoover, a native of Idaho, said he had returned to fish a favorite spot "where I filled a basket fishing years ago."

He said he plans to drive back to California after his release from Gooding Hospital and doubts he'll do any more fishing.

"After all, I'm 75 years old," said Hoover, who suffered a severely swollen right leg but no broken bones.

Brassy Comedy Breaks Routine

By BRYAN HAY
Times Staff

All too often, club acts playing Victoria are stereotyped.

You know the room, you know what kind of an act will be booked into it — unless, as is more-usually the case here, the house act has been running since the year dot and will cling to the gig until halted by death, old-age pension or atomic holocaust.

Which is what makes the Cooper Sisters who opened this week at Felice's on Nootka Court and will be there until Sept. 8 all the more welcome.

A brassy comedy and music duo playing every old line in the book and doing it it with a sense of timing that comes from a lifetime on stage, Audrey and Blanche Cooper move in like gang-busters on a level reeking of the Reno and Lake Tahoe supper clubs — which are their usual stamping grounds.

And they put a real jolt into the frequently mundane supper club atmosphere in the Garden City.

However, despite the fact that they have only played once before in recent years on the Island, in 1971 at CFB Esquimalt, the gals are no strangers to this area.

"Heck," booms Blanche, "we grew up in Vancouver. Before we went to school we were doing a daily 15-minute radio show on CJOR sponsored by the Okanagan Apple Growers."

And, even though both refused to go into any specifics about dates of early appearances because as Audrey says, "it comes too close to showing our ages" that does help to pin them down a little.

The Cooper Sisters, Felice's Ristorante, Nootka Court until Sept. 8. Showtimes 8, 9:30 and 10:45 p.m.

SLAUGHTER OF DEER SOARS

COOTES STORE, Va. (WP) — In the hills and hollows of the Shenandoah mountains, Virginia game wardens say, poachers have been beating the high cost of beef during the past two months by killing deer — illegally — in unprecedented numbers.

Normally, wardens say that in July and August they would find about six slain deer lying in the fields and dense woods, the victims of hunters' shotgun and rifle blasts. This year so far they've found 30.

Wardens can only guess at the number taken home, undetected, to the dinner table.

"I attribute it to the shortage of meat and high prices," says warden Ronald Wilfong. "Some of the (grocery store meat) counters were just about bare."

Both Wilfong, who's been a warden for 18 years, and Jesse Updike, a warden for 11 years here, say they have never seen such an out-of-season slaughter before. The deer season starts Nov. 19 in most parts of the state.

"My prediction is that this will get worse as it gets cooler," said Updike.

Meat Shortages 'May Be Easing'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. meat production during July totalled 2.631 billion pounds, down five per cent from June but about the same as July a year ago, the agricultural department reports.

A department spokesman said Tuesday meat shortages "may be easing" soon.

Officials said August figures, to be released a month from now, probably will be down sharply because of slowdowns in cattle marketing and temporary plant closings, but they added that beef production now appears to be moving up from the low levels of early August.

Part of the meat production drop from June to July may have been due to normal seasonal factors mainly affecting pork. One expert pointed out, however, that some beef plants, finding their selling prices still frozen while live cattle prices were rising, closed during the last two working days of July.

The July report covered a month in which rising livestock prices pushed retail beef and pork prices to new records.

WINNER OF THE DOWNTOWN BUSINESS OF THE DAY

$390.00 Spending Spree! Mrs. Jean Latzer of 2547 Inlet Avenue, named Purdy's Chocolates in the Empress as the Downtown Business of the Day on C-FAX and had recently shopped at a store with the D on the door. Over $2,500.00 has been given away this year to lucky shoppers who use the business with the D on the door. Mrs. B. White of Purdy's is presenting the money to Mrs. Latzer.

Stations Call Off 'Strike'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threats of shutdowns during the Labor Day weekend by gas stations in the United States to protest price controls have evaporated, so travellers should find no serious inconvenience in getting fuel, the American Automobile Association reported Tuesday.

The AAA's 13th and final summer country-wide check found gasoline supplies improved for the eighth straight week.

"This week 58 per cent of stations contracted are operating normally — maintaining hours of operation in effect before the summer fuel pinch and allowing motorists to fill their gas tanks," the AAA reported.

"This compares with 55 per cent normal operation last week and 43 per cent as of June 28, the low point of the summer."

The AAA said "attempts by organized retail gasoline dealer groups to stage mass shutdowns over Labor Day weekend became a rebellion without a cause when a federal judge suspended the Phase 4 price controls that would have forced dealers to return to profit margins they had in effect last Jan. 10.

Collision Injures Two

A head-on collision Tuesday night at Sooke and Glen Lake roads sent two people to hospital with leg injuries.

Cheok Wing Choy, CFB Esquimalt, was taken to Victoria General Hospital suffering from a broken knee cap. A passenger in the Choy car, Hock Lim Lee, of HMCS Thunder, received a dislocated knee in the accident.

Colwood RCMP said today the driver of the second car, Thomas Earl Connolly, 23, of Sooke, was not injured.

A collision early Tuesday in Central Saanich sent one woman to hospital with a head injury.

Mrs. Dorothy Mary Dodd, 59, of 969 Marchand, is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today after her car collided with a car driven by Douglas Arthur Andrew, 24, of 7339 Tomlinson at Stelly's Crossroad and Wallace Drive.

Andrew was not injured, police said.

CMHA Critics In Error

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Travis Cushing, president of the Canadian Mental Health Association (CMHA), said Tuesday the Church of Scientology "misinterprets and confuses" the aims and programs of the association.

Robert Dobson-Smith, research co-ordinator for the Committee on Institutional Psychiatry (CIP) of the Church of Scientology, said in an address to the CMHA annual meeting here Monday that the CMHA has not fulfilled the aims of its bylaws and has caused hundreds to suffer at the hands of experimental psychiatric techniques."

He referred to a letter the CIP wrote to Herb Gray, federal Corporate and Consumer Relations Minister, seeking an investigation into CMHA activities.

Mr. Cushing said the association's "current focus is on helping the one million children in Canada with emotional and learning disorders."

Referring to a CIP charge that the association is "promoting potential abuse to the public" and people should question the validity of floating charitable organizations.

"The funds available are never enough to cope with such urgent mental health problems across the country," he said.

The CIP said the CMHA had received more than $2 million this year.

In his letter to Mr. Gray, Mr. Dobson-Smith said the CIP is charging the CMHA with irresponsibility in misinforming the public and implying that everyone is mentally ill.

During the CMHA conference Tuesday one delegate moved a motion that the association take legal action against the CIP.

However, the motion did not come to a vote.

In his statement after a meeting of the CMHA's board of directors, Mr. Cushing pointed out that the CIP is sponsored and directed by the Church of Scientology and "this group is known for a unique philosophy and approach to life."

THERE'S MORE FOR YOU DOWNTOWN

TIGER TALES TEMPER TAXES

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

You'd never imagine, would you, that your taxes as a Victoria property owner could be even remotely affected by the current status of the Indian tiger or the African lion?

Well, friends, that's where you'd be wrong. For there is some slight connection between such exotic subjects and your mundane tax bill—in the form of the McPherson Playhouse.

The city-owned theatre's operating deficit more than doubled last year, from $5,961 in 1971 to $11,949, and recreation manager Jack Morgan says at least part of the explanation for a $3,600 drop in total revenue was a reduction in the number of film bookings.

"Back in the mid-1960's everyone started getting into the nature films thing—big game hunting, ecology, you name it," said Morgan.

"Now these people sell their films directly to the television stations so there's no need for them to go on the road."

To back up his point, Morgan said audiences which had built up to a peak of 37,000 for such movies in 1969, fell steadily to 34,000 in 1970, 21,000 in 1971 and a paltry 13,600 last year.

"The only ones we had last year were the World Adventure Tours. We've completely lost the nature films people, who would pay full rental rates for professional use and play to two shows," he added.

Morgan pointed out that because there is a substantial difference between rentals for amateur and professional use, the theatre could appear to be used more intensively yet produce less revenue if amateur functions predominate.

Revenue from building rentals fell from $57,105 in 1971 to $53,573 in 1972.

On the brighter side, Morgan said the city's two major recreational facilities, the Memorial Arena and the new Crystal Pool, reflected a "fairly healthy subsidization picture" last year.

The Memorial Arena had total operating expenses of $281,025 and revenue came to $257,099 for a deficit of $23,926 (up from $16,048 in 1971). Concession sales earned a $28,282 profit.

The new Crystal, opened Nov. 27, 1971, showed in its first full operating year last year that a modern, large facility could be run for only marginally more money than its Victorian predecessor.

Although operating expenditure went up from $178,795 in 1971 to a hefty $223,643, there was a corresponding jump in revenue from $92,505 to $135,034. Thus the $88,609 deficit last year was only $2,319 more than the previous year's figure.

The new pool attracted many more customers for public swimming, more than doubling 1971 revenue of $22,060 for a total of $54,257.

It's a Game of Giving —The Art of Matrimony

Marriage is the greatest educational institution on Earth —Channing Pollock.

The wedding of our youngest daughter, Jenny, to Walter Andrew Walsh, future airline pilot, went off very nicely, thank you, and if you think for a moment that I'm going to let the occasion slip by without some words on the subject of matrimony you're badly mistaken.

Marriage is a game of give and take, but it's the giving that makes it work. This is the fundamental thing about an alliance between a man and woman. Yet it is the one thing that's unknown or un-anticipated by the vast majority of couples who make that contract.

We did not know it or anticipate it when we tripped to the altar back when the world was young. I'm sure that neither Andy nor Jenny know it or anticipate it though, heaven knows, they seem much more mature than we were. (My wife still recalls her astonishment when I sloped into the church in my new Fox serge blue suit, licking a double-scoop butterscotch ice cream cone.)

★ ★ ★

Marriage is, essentially, an impossible arrangement. To work successfully, it demands a total compatibility between two persons whose whole life until then has been spent in developing their individualism. It may be the first week, the first month or the first year. Sooner or later, there will come the crunch of realization that something has to give. That is the moment of truth in matrimony. The decisions made then will determine whether it will be a hit or a miss.

The trick is not to lose or subjugate that individuality. No marriage is sicker than one in which a man or woman has wholly surrendered his or her true self in the interests of keeping the peace. The trick is to adjust to a relationship someone has described as equal independence, mutual dependence and reciprocal obligation.

The happiest marriages I know, in fact, involve couples who are totally dissimilar in personalities. Like partners in a business enterprise it is a strength, not a weakness, when each contributes a different dimension to the marriage. Surprisingly often, as in nature, opposites attract. Yet a quiet, reflective man and an effervescent, out-going woman (to cite just one example that comes to mind) may be an alliance far more durable than the marriage in which husband and wife are alike.

The one fatal move, an inherent peril in every marriage and, I would guess the most frequent cause of divorce, is for either party to try to re-make the other. Any attempt to shape the behaviour or the opinions or the character of a partner is doomed to failure in one of two ways. If it works it destroys that which was the original attraction. If it is attempted and fails it may be the cause of life-long recriminations. As it is in every kind of social encounter, "be yourself" is the only rule that works.

That is where the giving comes in. Joseph Addison, perhaps the most articulate of all advocates of marriage, may have said it best when he wrote that, having made the choice of matrimony, the couple had "bound themselves to be good-humored, affable, discreet, forgiving, patient and joyful, with respect to each other's frailties and perfections, to the end of their lives."

That that is possible without in any way sacrificing individuality is something that every happily married couple has had to learn after the honeymoon is over. Romance, alone, sexual fulfillment, alone, is not the long-term guarantee of success. That comes only with the knowledge of when to give.

Which is just another way of saying what may be said in one simple, splendid word: Understanding. And, really, that's all it takes.

Dear Deer Dash

A Langford youth who said he was chasing deer in his car on a Colwood soccer field in the middle of the night was fined $100 today for causing mischief.

William Keith Gray, 17, of 2838 Jacklin Road, was driving his car in circles around the Juan de Fuca Sports Field July 27, prosecutor Peter Birkett said in Victoria provincial court today.

Employees of the nearby Juan de Fuca Arena saw the car, locked the gates to the soccer field so Gray couldn't get out and phoned police.

Gray told police at that time he and a friend were just chasing deer that sometimes wander on the field.

"Well, I guess we weren't really chasing them, we were just sort of shining the car lights on them," Gray told Judge William Ostler today.

Ostler shook his head and said, "I thought nothing could surprise me anymore. This is the most destructively irresponsible act I've seen in a long time."

Gray was fined $100 and given a six-month probationary term. Within four months he was told to pay $100 to the Capital Regional District, the owner of the sports field, for damage caused by tire marks on the field. Gray's driver's licence was suspended for four months.

1,200 Want Police Vote

A petition asking for a referendum on Central Saanich police requirements has been signed by 1,200 ratepayers and the group circulating the petition is aiming for 1,350, spokesman Charles Mollard said today.

Mayor Archie Galbraith said 800 signatures would be needed to persuade council to hold a referendum. The petition will be presented council Sept. 4.

$15,000-Plus Deficit Predicted for Royal

Steady but swift lads, briefs Capt. Ron Otteson, right, of Edmonton

An operatilng deficit of between $10,650 and $15,650 is projected for the Royal Theatre if the building is purchased and operated by the four core municipalities as a cultural centre.

A feasibility report on the acquisition of the theatre, prepared by Victoria city staff and now being circulated to Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, states the higher figure would apply if a $5,000 capital item is included in the operatilng budget for repairs and new equipment.

The 60-year-old building on Broughton has been offered by Famous Players Ltd. to the municipalities for $250,000.

Backers of the proposal, led by Mayor Peter Pollen, favor the Royal as a temporary home for the Victoria Symphony.

The report says a study of sales in the surrounding area indicates land values at $12 to $14 per square foot, therefore the 18,000-square-foot site alone — without the building would be worth between $216,000 and $252,000.

★

It says the building is still in sound structural condition, adding: "There is no reason why it should not continue to remain sound for a further 60 years, given continued maintenance."

But the building has "some relatively minor discrepancies" with regard to the latest National Building Code requirements, including the need to install sprinklers in workshops, dressing rooms and storage areas; vents above stage for removing smoke in case of a fire; and heat sensors to activate the asbestos curtain.

The 1913-vintage plumbing is described as "reasonably adequate," but the report says three major items will require "repair and-or replacement" if the theatre's present use is changed:

—Wiring for footlights, curtain lights and associated dimmer controls.

—Stage ropes and draperies.

—The public address system.

No estimate is given in the report for the cost of replacing or repairing these items, but Mayor Pollen said last week it would cost $20,000 to $30,000 to refurbish the theatre to a reasonable standard.

★

Allan Purdy, chairman of the Pacific Coast Centre Foundation (a group which wants a cultural convention centre built in in Victoria, and is opposed to the Royal proposal) said today those three items alone would cost far more than the mayor's estimate.

Purdy said a sophisticated fly-rope mechanism alone could cost between $5,000 and $10,000, while spotlights and floodlights could account for a further $15,000—exclusive of wiring costs.

Earlier, the PPCF estimated that refurbishing the theatre to acceptable standards could cost taxpayers as much as $200,000.

As for the plumbing, Purdy laughed at the report's view that it is "reasonably adequate." It all depended what was meant by adequate, he said, adding that when some 150 performers from the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and the Victoria Symphony were there on one occasion "two toilets were available."

The feasibility study estimates total revenue at $44,100, but says this figure does not include possible revenues from films. Negotiations with Famous Players for renting the building to the firm for film shows are now in progress.

Operating expenses are estimated at $54,750.

Chopper Bellies Spawn Raw 'Green Berets' in Soggy Turf

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The blades of the three armed forces "choppers" whirled.

Teenagers sprang from the machines' bellies, flinging themselves prostrate on the sodden ground.

It was prelude to the most imaginative program ever carried out at a military college.

This was Tuesday when Royal Roads Military College's rawest recruits — they signed in Aug. 11 — received basic preparation for New League 1, the exercise which began this morning and ends Friday.

For most of the recruits, dressed in green fatigues, berets covering their college-cropped hair, it was their first eyeball-to-eyeball encounter with the military machine.

Before them at the ready, were three CH 135 combat helicopters from 408 squadron, flown from Edmonton for the exercise.

The 160 fledgling servicemen and their instructors listened intently as mission commander Capt. Ron Otteson briefed them on the proper ways in which to enter and leave the "choppers" at the fastest speed possible and with the greatest safety.

New League 1 is the brainchild of Royal Roads instructor Major Victor Coroy, an artillery man and pilot of both fixed-wing planes and helicopters.

Also on hand for the military initiation was Lt.-Col. R. W. Fentiman, commander of the Edmonton squadron.

He explained that the "choppers" were the same type as used in Vietnam — built in Texas and installed with twin engines manufactured in Montreal.

He gave a businesslike nod of approval as the recruits snapped to with a will — going through the evolutions like pros after a few dummy runs.

Coroy explained, "The exciting part of this exercise is that all three elements (land, sea and air) will be taking part.

"The name of the game is that the recruits will be, for the purpose of New League 1, a military force called in by civilian authorities, to help restore order during uprisings by dissidents."

With a grin, he added that a Royal Roads officer, taking the role of the civilian "governor," sported an award worn by his dog in a show, as his makeshift badge of office!

At first light today New League 1 began.

Aboard landing craft, the recruits were taken to Albert Head.

Between now and Friday, they will make their way from Albert Head to Ranch Point near Nanoose and then, Nanaimo, being airlifted by the Edmonton craft.

In each area, they will carry out evolutions, learning the arts of map and compass reading under field conditions.

The final trek will be by "Shank's Pony" — from Nanaimo to the Esquimalt firing base — no mean feat for the uninitiated.

As Coroy says:

"It will help limber them up, get them in shape for the annual obstacle race Sept. 21!"

HERE'S A CHANCE TO GET GRADE 12

People who never finished school will get a chance to earn a high school equivalency certificate by taking five tests Sept. 21 and 22.

Tests will be held at Camosun College and other community colleges around the province, and are open to anyone over 19, out of school at least a year and a B.C. resident at least six months.

Those who pass will have the equivalent of Grade 12 graduation.

Applicants will be tested on English expression, social studies, natural sciences, literary material, and mathematical ability. Understanding and reasoning powers will be tested, not facts the student remembers.

First test begins at 6 p.m. Sept. 21, the second at 8:30 p.m., the third Sept. 22 at 10 a.m., the fourth at 1 p.m. and the fifth at 3 p.m.

The multiple choice tests take up to two hours.

Anyone who fails can repeat the tests later. Future tests will be held in December, March and June.

Rent Bureau Cost Wrangle Nears End

After months of wrangling Saanich took the first steps Tuesday toward paying its share of the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau's costs.

Council's lands, housing and social services committee accepted the recommendation of projects assistant Dick Gibson that Saanich pay $3,084 of the bureau's $12,854 budget.

The committee will recommend to council that payment begin Sept. 1.

Saanich's participation in the city-based bureau was triggered by amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act requiring all districts and cities to have such bureaus.

Gibson described a cost formula in which the six Capital Region municipalities would pay 60 per cent of their share based on the number of their residents using the bureau's services, and 40 per cent based on the intermunicipal per capita formula.

If accepted by the other municipalities this means that Victoria would be assessed $6,996 of the $12,854 budget; Oak Bay, $1,071; Esquimalt, $1,334; Central Saanich, $218 and North Saanich, $151.

"We shoujld receive quarterly reports (from the bureau)," chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said, "They should not just include statistics but such kind of information as the type of enquiries they receive."

Under the new provincial legislation landlords cannot demand security deposits unless there is a municipal bylaw to spell out requirements.

Ald. Frank Waring said, "The bylaw should allow a landlord to have a right to have a security deposit."

Based along the lines of the city of Victoria's bylaw, the Saanich legislation, if approved by council, will allow a landlord to require a security deposit up to the amount of one-half of a month's rent.

It will also lay down requirements for return of the deposit if there have been no claims against it.

UVic Tally: It's Up Again

A healthy increase in student enrolment is expected by University of Victoria officials this year, reversing earlier predictions that a recent downward trend would continue.

Although exact enrolment figures are not available, director of Admissions Ronald Jeffels said the picture shows a "considerable increase."

An extra 400 applications for admission "looks very buoyant," he said.

Applications show a vast interest in marine biology, indicating the growing concern about the environment, and a marked increase in faculty of education.

"In the past students have been alarmed and depressed about a lack of jobs available in the field of education, but this year it looks like it's not affecting their decision," Jeffels said.

"The university's in a good position if this year's upward trend continues," he said.

He pointed out a growth in the number of part-time students entering the university to take both credit courses and non-credit evening courses.

"We don't know how many students have applied to two universities and are picking one of the two, so we can't tell for sure. But the part-time job market was buoyant this summer, so we're optimistic that students at least have the money to attend."

UVic vice-president Dr. Stephen Jennings was also optimistic.

"Our projections over the last two or three years showed registration is levelling off or declining silghtly and the situation might be due to community colleges, although it doesn't affect us too much in Victoria.

"It appears now we may get an increase, but until we get the students' money in our hot little hands we won't know for sure."

Projections showed last year's 4,163 full-time undergraduates was expected to drop to 3,970 this year and the prediction for next year is 3,898.

Jennings said the university's decision last spring to hold off budget increases in an attempt to close a $974,000 gap between UVic's operating budget and revenues for 1973-74 will not cause problems with an increased enrolment.

"We can cope with the reasonable increase of the kind predicted. And if it continues we'd have to study the matter."

Clinics, or Don't Say You Weren't Informed

Some midweek musings, or straight off the wire here's one for the book: Herb Mul-Key of Washington christened Buffalo Bills' new 80,000-seat stadium by running the opening kickoff 102 yards for a touchdown: Asked one reporter: "Anyone know if that's a stadium record?"

Meanwhile, it certainly is a worthwhile contribution to sport, the series of athletic clinics scheduled at the Gordon Head campus of the University of Victoria this fall.

Basketball, soccer and volleyball are the main sports involved with Jack Donohue, the Canadian national coach, heading a basketball group which includes B.C. provincial coach John Olson, UVic coach Gary Taylor and Oak Bay High's Don Horwood for the men's clinic, Nov. 3. Before that, on Oct. 27, Olson and George Siborne, an international referee from Vancouver, and well known on the Island, will conduct a clinic and panel for referees, managers, coaches, etc. Since there are always rule changes to be considered, and explained, this should be a must for those connected with the sport.

This is not to ignore, either, Mike Gallo, coach of the UVic Vikettes, who won a Canadian championship in his first year with the team. He will conduct basketball clinics on Sept. 21, 22 and 23. In volleyball, the premier guest will be Hideo Doya, Asian zone international coach, who will impart his knowledge on Sept. 27 and 28. In soccer, it's Brian Hughes and his fundamental skills beginning Thursday night.

These clinics can only help those wishing to improve their techniques, and are open to all. So don't be shy. Turn up and don't say you weren't informed.

A recent visit to Seattle confirms the fact the towers are rising on the King County domed stadium and the scheduled completion date is January 1975. The stadium is being built to accommodate crowds of 65,000 for football and 60,000 for baseball. Pro sports, naturally, are a certainty. Meanwhile SuperSonic officials reported ticket sales are up 25 per cent with six weeks left to go, coach Bill Russell has virtually predicted a playoff team. For the person who asked about tickets, the Sonic ticket office is 221 W. Harrison Street.

If the word is that racing driver Jackie Stewart is the flamboyant playboy type, what isn't said is that Stewart doesn't smoke, and rarely drinks. He once said he couldn't afford a fuzzy head. "A world class driver can't afford to blunt vital reaction times with a muggy feeling during a race." He is also closely connected with improving safety factors in racing and is always willing to try out something new if he feels it will add to the safety program.

On the lighter side is a report from Christchurch, New Zealand, site of the 10th British Commonwealth Games (Jan. 24—Feb. 2, 1974), and what's yours please? Make mine a Games cocktail could be the answer, or as they will say in Christchurch: "A Games Crow Thrower." It's long and cool and the recipe includes bourbon, cracked ice, Galliano, Grand Marnier, apple juice and orange. Besides, the drink is to be canned. The patrons will be what's bottled. Oh, well, we give you all the news.

Some otherwise or overlooked trivia: It was Barry Harvey who hit the first Little League home run in our town . . . by 1975 there will be 25 ice arenas on Vancouver Island . . . and there's a dandy yarn in Sport Mag on golf caddies and how they are hitting the ball badly, how we scored, and after a round, how I shot 68 . . . it is also said that Angelo Argea, who toils for Jack Nicklaus, draws a weekly salary and gets a bonus at the end of the year; and "It's safe to say too he earns more than most of the 200 or 300 golfers who try their luck on the tour."

It may be late in the season, but if your sex life hasn't been up to snuff lately, go for a swim, a good long swim. There's a recent report from a team of Australian doctors who experimented with Olympic class swimmers going all out for 800 metres. Think this would leave you in no condition for anything? Not so, say the doctors, this effort doubles the sex hormone level in the blood. Only problem is one hour later everything is normal again.

HIGH THERE—Calgary linebacker Steve Brown leaps into air in an attempt to block a B.C. Lions' pass in Tuesday's Western Football Conference game at Vancouver which Lions won 9-2. It was Lions' third straight win and put them in a tie for first place. (CP wirephoto)

What's This? Lions on Top!

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unfortunately for head coach Jim Duncan and his Calgary Stampeders, good performances by four men out of 24 don't usually produce football victories.

That held true Tuesday night as British Columbia Lions handed the Stampeders a 9-2 setback in a Western Football Conference encounter in which the score didn't provide a true measure of the play.

"I thought our front four played a great game, they really kept the pressure on," said Duncan, following the game at Empire Stadium.

The rest of the Stampeders showed little, producing little offence behind quarterbacks Pete Liske and Jim Lindsey.

The Lions also stuttered when they had the ball, getting 19 first downs and 246 yards of offence, but they did strike for a second-quarter touchdown.

That score came with only nine seconds remaining in the opening half after the B.C. defence had snuffed out one of the few offensive threats the Stampeders managed.

Lindsey had moved the Stampeders down to the B.C. 28, but a penalty moved them 20 yards back and on the next play, linebacker George Anderson darted in front of the Calgary receiver, giving B.C. an interception and a first down on their own 33 with about 90 seconds left.

B.C. quarterback Don Moorhead then ran the ball, scrambled in the backfield before tossing a strike to wide receiver Jim Young and tossed another pass to Monroe Eley to move the ball to the Calgary two.

Johnny Musso then took two cracks at the Calgary line before moving the ball across. Ted Gerela added the convert.

B.C. could have had a wider margin, but Gerela missed four field goals, two going for single points.

The Stamps got their only points from the defence as punter Eric Guthrie of the Lions conceded a safety when the ball was centred over his head and into the end zone on a third-down punt.

Liske, who the Stamps hoped would lead them out of the doldrums, played only the opening 20 minutes before giving way to Lindsey. Leon McQuay the flashy running-back acquired from Toronto Argonauts, sat out the second half with bruised knee ligaments.

McQuay, before leaving the game, had 35 yards on eight carries and never looked dangerous.

The win, B.C.'s third in a row after a pair of losses to Saskatchewan Roughriders, moved them into a tie for first place in the WFC with Saskatchewan and Edmonton Eskimos.

Injury to Catcher Tempers Bates' Second Straight Win

HULL, Que. — Dave Ruthowsky's superb control on the mound enabled Victoria Bates to claim a second straight victory Tuesday in the round-robin portion of the Canadian senior men's softball championship.

Ruthowsky fired a four-hitter, struck out 16 batters and didn't allow a walk, as Victoria blanked Prince Edward Island, 1-0.

The lone run came in the third inning after third-baseman Wayne Forland doubled, raced to third on a ground by Ruthowsky and crossed the plate on another groundout by Bill Shortt.

Victoria's jubilitation, however, was dimmed somewhat by the loss of catcher Bill James.

James, hurt sliding into second base in the fourth inning was taken to hospital. The injury was later diagnosed as a broken bone in the foot and his leg was put in a cast.

Les Barber finished the game and is expected to start behind the plate tonight in a game against defending-champion Saskatchewan.

Bates' coach Joe Patterson is expected to start Stan Kern on the mound tonight. The B.C. champions play Northwest Territories on Thursday and wind up the preliminary round-robin play Friday against Manitoba.

Each of the 13 teams in the tourney play five preliminary games with the top two teams from each of the two divisions meeting in semi-final battles Friday. The winners meet Saturday in a nationally-televised final game.

In other Tuesday games, Northwest Territories upset Sakatchewan 5-3 after two extra innings, Alberta defeated Yukon Territory 7-1, Hull topped Newfoundland 10-7, Ontario dropped Manitoba 7-1 and Nova Scotia edged Quebec 3-2.

Nova Scotia leads the green division with a 3-0 record while Bates and Northwest Territories share second spot with 2-0 records.

Hull and Ontario are unbeaten in three games to lead the red division while Newfoundland is second with two wins.

'SI' Impugning Joe's Integrity

Times News Services

Joe Namath filed a $2.25 million damage suit Tuesday in Manhattan Supreme Court against Sports Illustrated, charging the magazine with impugning his honesty and integrity and using his picture without permission to promote its circulation.

The New York Jets quarterback, who described himself in court papers as "among the highest paid proofessional athletes in the world," claimed that since June, 1969, Sports Illustrated "has conducted a malicious campaign" to malign and impugn his integrity and honesty and to present to the reading public an unfair and untrue representation of him.

While Namath did not detail the charges, he claimed that he had been "greatly distressed, embarrassed and held up to public ridicule" by the magazine.

The use of his picture to promote the magazine, Namath said, began last Sept. 11 and is continuing. He said he generally gets paid for endorsing a product. The magazine has 20 days to respond to the suit.

British Amateur champion Dick Siderowf and George Burns III, the Canadian Amateur titleholder, posted victories on a scorching, formful opening day of the 73rd United States Amateur golf championship at Toledo, Ohio.

Campbell, who has made seven Walker Cup appearances, ousted Mack Murray, a 23-year-old Florida collegian playing in his first national Amateur, 7 and 6.

Siderowf, 36, a Westport, Conn., stockbroker, overcame a 1-up lead by John Sutter of Westfield, Mass., after seven holes with birdies at eight and nine, and went on to post a 3 and 1 decision.

Burns, a chunky 24-year-old from East Williston, N.Y., turned the front nine with a 2-up lead over Van Gillen of Conroe, Tex., and won 5-3.

Old Guard Rides Again

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Longden will make a comeback as a jockey today as the oldest of the old-timers in a special race at Del Mar.

The 66-year-old grandfather from Arcadia, Calif., who was born in Tabor, Alta. and grew up in England, is one of eight retired jockeys saddling up for the five and one-half furlong event. Others are Ralph Neves, 52; Pete Moreno, 46; Angel Valenzuela, 44; George Taniguchi, 43; Ken Church, 42; Bill Harmatz, 42, and Dean Hall, 36.

The jockeys have been running on the beach and doing calesthenics to get back into riding shape.

Neves, after a workout, confessed to being three years younger than he has been listed when he rode. "I'm not 55, I'm only 52," he said, which means he skirted regulations to begin riding professionally at the age of 13.

Longden, although the oldest, may be in the best condition. As a trainer, he has exercised his own horses and was considering riding in an official race until his wife, Hazel, talked him out of it.

Bill Shoemaker, 42, is old enough to ride with the old-timers, but the man who broke Longden's all-time record of winning rides wasn't allowed in the race because he isn't retired.

There will be no public betting on the race, in which the horses won't be as well-known as the riders.

Vikings Deal Washington To Denver

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League have traded wide receiver Gene Washington to Denver for wide receiver Rod Sherman and an undisclosed draft choice.

Washington, 28, is a seven-year veteran but has been bothered by a foot injury the last two seasons.

Sherman, 28, also a seven-year veteran, played for Oakland, Cincinnati and Denver. He led Denver in receiving last season with 38 catches for 661 yards and three touchdowns.

Vikings also traded cornerback Charlie Stukes to Los Angeles for an undisclosed draft choice.

Players Won't Risk Penalty

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League Players' Association (NHLPA) has decided to postpone negotiations with the NHL owners over the reserve and arbitration clauses until it is advised by New York anti-trust lawyer it has retained.

A meeting with the owners Tuesday was cancelled only four hours before the scheduled time. It was to have focused on the reserve clause — found in all pre-June, 1972, NHL contracts — and the arbitration clause, in contracts signed after that date.

Ira Millstein, the anti-trust lawyer involved in the proposed National Basketball Association-American Basketball Association merger of last year, advised the NHLPA not to meet with team owners because "it might prejudice the players' rights."

Millstrein said it was retained by the NHLPA "to see if there's a legal possibility that sitting down with the owners might compromise the players' rights."

The meeting between team owners and the association was scheduled before United States Federal Court Judge A. Leon Higginbotham made a ruling earlier this month which gave the World Hockey Association the right to sign players who were under pre-1972 contracts with NHL clubs.

The decision reinforced the judge's November ruling that prevented the NHL from enforcing its reserve clause because it violated U.S. anti-trust laws.

Alan Eagleson, NHLPA executive director, wondered whether the NHL was a monopoly, and if so, whether all the contracts are invalid. "If it's a monopoly, are all players free agents? It's so much in the air, we're in no position to do anything now."

"That's why we can't sit down now," Eagleson said. "We don't want to risk an anti-trust penalty."

Typically Tough—And Very Good

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Typically Welsh. Physically and technically, that's how the Llanelli Rugby Club looked to about 1,000 fans Tuesday when the tourists subdued a Victoria Rugby Union side 40-9 at Royal Athletic Park.

The Welsh showed some early caution because, as manager Glan Tucker explained, they "had heard British Columbia was the rugby stronghold in Canada."

But that early caution disappeared before game's end and it was Llanelli players who claimed much of the respect and their sixth victory with one more to go on a seven-game Canadian tour.

Muscular and powerful runners, the Welsh proved basically too competent for the Victoria Union President's XV.

They dominated the lineouts and, thanks to the brilliant execution of scrum half Selwyn Williams, the loose scrums. As well, Llanelli forwards appeared more willing to go for the ball than their Victoria counterparts.

The Welsh also enjoyed technical superiority on attack. Fullback Roger Davis was ever-dangerous when he moved up to support his three-quarter line to create an overlap.

Welsh ball-carriers, when on a thrust, invariably had one of their own backing them up. It was a tactic that kept play moving. On the Other hand, when a Victoria thrust was stopped, play stopped.

Captain Delme Thomas, a lock, and No. 8 Mike Griffiths dominated the lineouts while Bernard Thomas and Roy Bergiers, a pair off youthful centres, carried Wales' attack.

Bernard Thomas and Bergiers each scored two tries while Griffiths and Tom David counted the other four-pointers. Phil Bennett kicked five converts and two penalty goals.

Still, one could not accuse Victoria, of being overwhelmed. Victoria's forwards had enough good moments to goad Llanelli players into some displays of frustration.

Victoria's ball-handling appeared too anxious but playing-coach Alan Rees, outside half, Gillie Grieg and Jim Wenman served well in the backfield.

Rees scored all of the points for Victoria with three penalty goals, all in the second half. The Welsh led 12 at the half.

Llanelli completes its Canadian visit Saturday afternoon at Centennial Stadium by playing Victoria's Crimson Tide.

Calm young female cougar peers through foliage at trackers

Cougar-Tracking Dewars Stock Up Information

stewart lang

If the excitement of treeing, tranquillizing and placing radio collars around the necks of cougars begins to pall, Percy and Penny Dewar can always turn to studying the wolf which recently started hanging around their base camp.

However, it's unlikely their cougar-chasing activity, rapidly becoming a seven-days-a-week job, is apt to become tiresome.

It had been a year or so since we last talked to the Vancouver Island couple who have dedicated their lives to studying cougars.

A recent up-Island jaunt brought us up to date.

Following an early-morning plane ride with Penny, who "tracked" three of the cougars they had tagged during the past 18 months, we returned to their camp, deep in the heart of MacMillan Bloedel's Northwest Bay logging division south of Parksville.

Here, while downing the pancakes, bacon and coffee Percy had waiting, they filled us in on some of the successes of the past year.

Out of a total of 39 cougars treed with their pack of hounds to date, Percy and Penny have placed collars containing miniature radio-transmitters on seven. Six are still on and four are functioning.

Each transmitter sends out a different pulsing pattern, which is picked up by a directional antennae and small receiver, either from the air or on the ground.

"But when you don't get them, it doesn't necessarily mean the collars are not working," said Percy.

Sometimes the cougar can be in a spot, such as a deep canyon, where the signal is blanketed.

"We're not getting as much information as we'd like by air but we do know where they are," added Percy.

"We would like to follow them on foot every day," he explained. "We were able to do this with a female which we followed for about five months. She would stay for about six days on every kill she made."

Percy and Penny would then go in to check out the kill and collect the jaw to determine the deer's age. This female was carrying kittens at the time and killed a deer 'about every 10 days."

"I think she would eat more than normal when she was going to have kittens," Percy pointed out.

She stayed within a 30-square mile area and was relatively easy to track. Males present a different tracking problem.

"We found out that the males travel a lot farther than I ever thought," said Percy, who has been hunting cougars most of his life as a professional guide.

One of the first males tagged, which they named Albert, really moves.

"About four days after we got him, he was over at Cameron Lake."

He generally covers an area of about 240 square miles.

However, Percy doesn't subscribe to the generally-accepted notion that the males carve out and defend a specific territory.

"So far we haven't really been able to prove it, although we know Albert and two other big males are in the same area," said Percy. To prove that the males just wander at will and don't have any territorial urges, Percy and Penny plan to place collars on the other two males to show they all stay in the same place.

Tracking the female along the ground also shed a little light on the condition of the deer preyed upon by cougars.

"It was about half-and-half as far as condition went," said Penny.

"I think too, when they decide to find a deer, it's whichever deer they come upon first . . . there's no selection," said Percy.

"And, I don't think there could be because the area they're hunting here is all closed in . . . there's no big plain. They're not chasing a big heard of animals where the weak or the sick would hang back. Here, their chances of getting one type of deer are the same as any other type," Penny continued.

Something new had been added to their equipment since last year.

A rifle, powered by a .22 blank, is now used to shoot tranquillizing darts into the animals and the old carbon dioxide-powered pistol has been reserved for younger cats.

The cougars have to be in the right position in the tree for Percy to shoot. Branches, which could deflect the dart into the wrong part of the animal, can't be in the way.

"We don't want to take a chance, that's why we've treed so many," explained Percy. "It's just as well if they're not in a good position to let them go and later have another try at it."

Besides, trying again at a later date keeps the hounds in shape.

Meanwhile, they're trying to figure out a way to capture that wolf.

Texas Ends Baltimore Run at 14

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles finally lost a baseball game Tuesday night, but they didn't lose any ground in the race for the American League East Division title.

On the same night as their 14-game winning streak was brought to a halt by lowly Texas Rangers, all three of their principal rivals were losing too.

The Rangers won 5-3. Detroit Tigers, in first place when the Oriole streak started, lost 5-0 to Minnesota Twins and remained seven games behind Baltimore.

Second-place Boston Red Sox, five games behind Baltimore, lost 6-1 to Oakland A's and fourth-place New York Yankees were beaten 5-2 by Califrnia Angels.

In Tuesday's other American League games, Cleveland Indians edged Kansas City Royals 4-3 and Chicago White Sox topped Milwaukee Brewers 6-4.

McNALLY LOSES

Dave McNally, who had won 17 in a row against the Rangers and their predecessors, Washington Senators, since 1969 was the Baltimore loser.

Joe Decker, who didn't get out of the Minnesota bullpen until June, won his sixth in a row as he limited Detroit to five hits. Joe Lis drove in two runs for the Twins with a homer and a single.

Manager Billy Martin watched the Tigers lose for the 10th time in their last 15 games, but wouldn't concede anything.

"We're not out of it," he said. "As low as we are right now, we're not out of it. You may not believe that, but things can happen fast."

In the National League, Henry Aaron moved another step closer to Babe Ruth's all-time home run record of 714, but the Atlanta slugger was overshadowed by the homecoming of a former teammate.

Returning to Atlanta for the first time since being traded by the Braves last winter, Rico Carty drove in four runs to help Chicago Cubs subdue Atlanta 9-6.

Aaron accounted for three of Atlanta's runs with his 706th career homer.

St. Louis Cardinals remained two games ahead of Pittsburgh by defeating Houston Astros 8-3 while the Pirates clipped Cincinnati Reds 8-3. In other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Montreal Expos 6-1, and New York Mets edged San Diego Padres 8-6 and Philadelphia Phillies nipped San Francisco Giants 1-0.

Stockers Capture Opener

Audra Sinclair hurled a four-hitter Tuesday to lead Stockers North Americans to a 2-1 victory over CAV Electronics in the opening game of the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League playoff final at Hyacinth Park.

Stockers took a 1-0 lead after four innings but CAV bounced back to tie it up in the top of the seventh. Stockers scored what was the winning run in the bottom of the frame when an opposition outfielder dropped two fly balls.

Second game of the series is scheduled for tonight at 6:30 on the same diamond.

Century, Seaboard Dominate All-Stars

Not surprisingly, Seaboard Construction and Century Inn players dominate the 1973 Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League all-star team.

Seaboard, playoff champions, placed five men on the two all-star squads named while Century, the regular-league winners, landed six.

The all-stars, bolstered by other players who drew votes, will line up on opposite sides of the field tonight to feature "fan appreciation night" at Heywood Avenue park.

The game, scheduled to start at 6:30, will officially end season activity although Royal Oak and Seaboard will play an exhibition game on Thursday.

Proceeds from Thursday's game at Central Park will help defray Royal Oak's expenses while travelling to Kelowna for the B.C. senior "C" men's championships next weekend.

Batting champion Reg Underwood of Royal Oak and second baseman Scott Sinclair of Seaboard were the only unanimous choices to the first team. Pitcher Bill Polz, a 19-game winner, missed unanimous selection by one vote.

Others earning first-team berths were Pete Songhurst of Sooke, Bob Reid and Bob Lowe of Seaboard, Bob Butterworth of Mike's and Harold Strukoff and Terry Oscarson of Century.

Following are the first and second teams as chosen by field managers:

FIRST TEAM — Terry Oscarson, Century Inn (c); Pete Songhurst, Sooke (1b); Scott Sinclair, Seaboard (2b); Harold Strukoff, Century Inn (ss); Bob Reid, Seaboard (3b); Reg Underwood, Royal Oak (of); Bob Butterworth, Mike's (of); Bob Lowe, Seaboard (of); Bill Polz, Century Inn (p); Jack Lundquist, Royal Oak (mgr.)

RUNNERS-UP — Ed Bedford, Port Angeles (c); Gord Rutherford, Century Inn (1b); Bob Custance, Century Inn (2b); Brian Grexton, Seaboard (ss); Ron Grant, Mike's (3b); John Hughes, Century Inn (of); Jack Lusk, Bell's (of); Jim Anderson, Labatts (of); Glen Bullen, Seaboard (p); Ernie Savole, Seaboard (mgr).

PACKING IT UP after illustrious 15-year career in National Football League is linebacker Ray Nitschke of Green Bay Packers. The defensive great announced his retirement Tuesday.

Tolan Returns To Fold

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds reinstated outfielder Bobby Tolan to the active list Tuesday night after baseball officials overruled disciplinary action taken against the outspoken veteran.

National League president Chub Feeney and commissioner Bowie Kuhn notified the club that placing Tolan on the 15-day disabled list after a stormy incident last week did not meet league requirements.

Tolan filed a grievance with the National League office Monday.

The action allowed Tolan to become eligible immediately.

"This pleases us becuase he won't be lost to the club for 15 days," said Reds' president Bob Howsam. "It naturally strengthens our club to have Tolan return with his back healthy. He will have a chance to help us win a pennant."

A $350 fine remains in effect, however, the Reds said.

Tolan became embroiled in a vocal battle with the Reds after an angry exchange with Sheldon Chief Bender, director of player personnel, in the clubhouse Friday night and again Saturday by telephone.

Bender had requested Tolan, who has been in the worst slump of his career, undergo a complete physical examination. When Tolan refused, words were exchanged.

TEMPORARY CLEARANCE FOR PROS

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The International Lawn Tennis Federation (ILTF) Tuesday threatened to bar any players from taking part in its tournaments if they sign contracts with the new World Team Tennis (WTT) league.

Robert Abdessalam, president of the ILTF emergency committee, made it clear at a news conference that the United States open championships at Forest Hills, N.Y., due to begin today would not be affected even though 20 top professionals have signed with WTT.

Abdessalam said he and the ITLF "feel the whole concept of signing contracts is wrong," and that the formation of WTT would "build up tennis into show business rather than tournaments."

Decisions on whether players may be disqualified will be made at a meeting in New York Sept. 6-9.

Billie Jean King, John Newcombe, Linda Tuero, Clark Graebner, Rosemary Casals and Owen Davidson are among the pros said to have signed contracts with the 16-team WTT, which hopes to begin its schedule next May.

Island Squads Difficult Against Visiting Irish

Vancouver Island sides proved unbeatable in international exhibition women's field hockey matches against two Northern Ireland teams.

Victoria's Under-23 side defeated Stranmillis College 2-0 after the President's XI battled to a scoreless draw against Pegasus Club Tuesday at the University of British Columbia. Victoria teams swept both games Monday to open the four-game series.

Jan Crook scored early in the first half for Under-23s and Leslie Williams connected for the insurance tally with 10 minutes remaining. Victoria goalie Nesta Horne was not severely tested by the visitors.

Phyllis Thompson, the Pegasus goalie, managed to stave off defeat as the President's XI dominated play in the final half. Shots by Diane Whittingham and Jenny John, which went into the net after the break, were disallowed — the first because it was ruled a dangerous shot and the second because of an offside call.

Pegasus had their best chance in the first half when Jennifer Givan was given a penalty bully. Goaltender Liz Hawes managed to make the save and gave Victoria a lift.

Miss Whittingham and Mrs. John now journey to Toronto to play on the national team against an Australian side Sept. 8. The Australians play in Vancouver on Sept. 16 and meet Vancouver Island Selects Sept. 18 in Victoria.

Rose Still in Second

KINGSTON, Ont. — Victoria's Tony Rose retained second place Tuesday in the OK Dinghy class competition at the Canadian Olympic Training Regatta.

Clive Roberts of Auckland, N.Z., scored his second win of the regatta to remain in top spot and Rob Woodbury of Brockville, Ont., is third overall.

John Winsor of North Vancouver kept his lead in the Fireball class despite a fifth-place finish Tuesday.

Meanwhile, competitors in three of the nine divisions woke up this morning not knowing how they finished after about 110 boats crossed the finish line, spinnakers flying, within one five-minute period.

The three classes — Finns, Tornados and 470s — use nearly the same rounding marks but normally finish separately because of a difference in their speeds. But light winds Tuesday gave the smaller boats an edge.

Officials hope to sort things out today but there was speculation that the race might be scrubbed.

TAX BREAK EVAPORATES

OTTAWA (CP) — Four persons who paid no Canadian income taxes on nearly $1.5 million they earned in 1971 won't get such a big tax break on the 1972 returns they filed this year, a government spokesman said Tuesday.

Tightened rules on business deductions, which allowed four real estate businessmen to write off $2.28 million and wipe out their federal tax liability, will sharply reduce the building of "tax losses" to escape paying income taxes, added the spokesman for the national revenue department.

The spokesman explained that under previous rules applying to 1971 income, an individual could use depreciation allowances and other real estate deductions to pile up a large paper loss and apply it against other income to wipe out their tax bill.

In the case of the four 1971 individuals, the losses were applied to wipe out taxes on all other income, including $255,000 in wages and salaries, $185,000 in other business income, $221,000 in dividends, $59,000 in bank interest and $769,000 in foreign investment income (they also wrote off $261,000 in credits for taxes paid to foreign governments).

Such a loss now can only be applied to reduce the real estate income to zero, leaving the individual still subject to taxes on other income, the spokesman said.

Lawyers Told Look Within

VANCOUVER (CP) — The need for the legal profession to initiate changes, a recurrent theme at the annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association, was voiced again Tuesday.

Edmonton lawyer D. C. McDonald, speaking at a panel discussion on the prospects for the judiciary in 1984, said if the profession does not implement necessary changes, "events will do so."

"The people must feel that our system of the administration of justice is constantly introspective, self-searching, capable of change, responsive to the needs of people as well as to the need to apply the rules."

McDonald's comments came during another busy day for the 1,500 delegates as the CBA held discussions on wide-ranging topics. Five keynote resolutions debated Monday were to be brought to a general session today and Thursday for approval.

McDonald said many of the questions he posed "have been discussed during recent years by our chief justices, by our judges and by lawyers."

DISCUSSIONS INFORMAL

"However, the judicial discussions are in camera and the lawyers' discussions have been informal and unrecorded."

He proposed interprovincial judicial exchanges to help combat the risk of fatigue and stagnation that may affect judges because of the volume of work and its repetitiveness.

He also suggested the temporary assignment of appellate justices as trial judges. He quoted an appellate judge in Alberta as saying he would welcome trial work for a couple of months every two or three years.

Serious debate and consideration should be given to a proposal that judges should retire with the jury when it considers the verdict.

McDonald quoted Mr. Justice William Sinclair of the Alberta Supreme Court as calling for a basic change in attitude, "a recognition that judges exist to serve the public, and not the reverse.

"In the final analysis, the courts can function in a democratic society only when they have the goodwill and the support of the great majority of the people behind them."

IMPARTIALITY NEEDED

Gerard Beaudoin of Montreal, chairman of the CBA's constitutional and international law section, said the judiciary must continue to remain independent and impartial. "Its structures should reflect its impartiality, judges should be competent and the administration of justice should be well organized."

He hoped that by 1984 the decisions of the International Court of Justice will become binding. "But this is a very optimistic view."

One of the most controversial statements of the day came from Regina lawyer Morris Shumiatcher concerning ombudsman.

Dr. Shumiatcher said the role of ombudsman as established in several provinces is "a snare and a delusion" and will lead to a new layer of bureaucracy.

Broader, Tougher Human Rights Act Sought by Groups

A brief asking for a broader and tougher B.C. Human Rights Act was well received by Labor Minister Bill King when it was presented to him this week, Mary Beardsmore of the Victoria Voice of Women said today.

King and B.C. human rights director Kathleen Ruff met Monday with Beardsmore and Larry Ryan of the Victoria Labor Council, which sponsored the brief along with the Voice of Women.

"We were pleased with the reception," said Beardsmore. "I think we agreed on most things."

Many of the points in the brief are currently being reviewed by the provincial government in preparation for revisions in the Human Rights Act expected to be introduced in the fall session of the legislature, she said.

The brief asks that the act be extended to protect people from discrimination on the basis of marital status and political beliefs.

The act should protect people from being refused living quarters to rent or buy on the basis of their economic or family status, says the brief.

The brief was first presented to MLAs last October, but a meeting with King and Ruff couldn't be arranged until now, said Beardsmore.

Mill Closure Continues

NANAIMO — MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac plup mill here remained closed today as workers stayed off the job in a dispute over suspension of a steam plant employee. The plant closed Monday evening.

Meanwhile, a B.C. labor relations board hearing continued here on a labor dispute between the company and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The dispute arose when negotiations for a new contract broke down more than a month ago.

All or Nothing—Sidney

Swimming, Skating, Curling

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Children were the winners in Sidney Tuesday night.

Build 'em a $1.5 million recreation centre said 300 citizens.

The enthusiastic crowd gathered in Sancha Hall to explore the pros and cons of holding a referendum on a fully-equipped centre which would cost taxpayers another five or six mills over the next 20 years.

They didn't want just a swimming pool, just a skating or curling rink. It was "all or nothing."

After the meeting Mayor Stan Dear told reporters he hadn't anticipated such a "favorable" response, noting that previous attempts to provide recreational facilities in Sidney had failed.

Dear said Sidney Kinsmen tried 15 years ago to promote a swimming pool with the help of Central and North Saanich. But the idea didn't reach the referendum stage.

A referendum was held in 1970 on a senior citizen's activity centre and a pool. Silver Threads won and the pool lost.

The next attempt was for just a pool in 1971. It went down by 18 votes, said Dear.

Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association, a private citizens' group, tried to get financial support for a similar project through a debenture sale but was unsuccessful.

Sidney already owns a seven-acre parcel opposite Tulista Park near the Washington State Ferries terminal and council is now looking into the possibility of acquiring 17 acres owned by the federal government across the highway from Sidney.

Dear said a long-term lease —50 or 99 years—on the government property would be necessary, but purchasing the land would be preferable.

In dollars and cents, said Dear, taxpayers could expect to pay an additional $60 a year for the loan and $25 for maintenance.

But admission charges would likely lower maintenance, said the mayor.

"I think it's fair to say the cost of operation would be virtually nil," he said.

Some pensiones argued the increased taxes would be unbearable for people living on fixed incomes and suggested the costs of the centre be assumed by people with children.

A younger man argued Sidney is becoming a popular town for young families and the question of recreational facilities is bound to be brought up each year. And each year the costs of building such a complex increase.

At the outset of the meeting Dear said council was seeking information on the possibility of a provincial government grant which would pay a maximum of $333,333.

Another possible financial load lightener would be assistance from the other two communities on the peninsula.

But "in view of past experience I would say the likelihood of co-operation is doubtful," said the mayor.

Dear said he had asked North Saanich for assistance with a proposed swimming pool and got none.

The other two mayors also refused to support SPARA's proposal, said Dear.

But this time it's Sidney's ball game and Dear is confident a referendum will be held with the next municipal election Nov. 17.

"This has given us the encouragement we need now," he said.

The matter will be further discussed at council's committee meeting Sept. 4.

POINT ROBERTS SECESSION OUT

SEATTLE (AP) — Proposals to cede Point Roberts, Wash., to Canada won't be discussed at the Sept. 5 meeting of the International Point Roberts Board, says one of the three American board members.

"U.S. members have made it clear. There won't be any discussion of the possibility of ceding Point Roberts to Canada or leasing Point Roberts to Canada as an alternative solution," said James Dolliver.

Dolliver, a board member and administrative assistant to Gov. Dan Evans, said controversial plans to further develop Point Roberts will be discussed at the meeting in Washington, D.C.

Point Roberts is a six-square-mile geographic oddity, jutting south from Canada across the 49th parallel into Whatcom County, Wash. The only roads leading to the peninsula go through Canada.

Loophole Use Denied For Sign

A bid by a Saanich shopkeeper to be given a land-use contract in order to get a larger sign on his store was soundly rejected by the municipal planning committee Tuesday.

Armando Barbon asked for the contract in order to put a larger advertising sign on his confectionery store at 3891 Douglas, a block north of the municipal hall.

In a report, municipal planner Tom Loney said:

"A land-use contract should be properly used and not be used for reasons of expediency."

Ald. Leslie Passmore told Barbon:

"I'm sure, Mr. Barbon, they (existing signs) are big enough and ugly enough now. We're not going to downgrade our own sign bylaw."

Western Hemisphere Now Free of Smallpox

ATLANTA (WP) — Smallpox has been eradicated from the western hemisphere officials at the Centre for Disease Control said Tuesday.

An international commission, made up of epidemiologists from six nations, weighed evidence for two weeks in Brazil, where the last known case was reported more than two years ago, and declared last week that Brazil was free of the disease.

Dr. J. Donald Millar, director of the centre's bureau of state services and formerly head of a smallpox eradication project that helped drive the disease from West Africa in the late 1960s, served on the commission. Other members were from Brazil, Canada, Venezuela and Portugal, Millar said.

The formal declaration that a continent is free of the disease is a procedure set up by the World Health Organization as part of a campaign to eradicate smallpox from the globe.

Millar said the last reported case occurred in Brazil in April, 1971.

"Who, in their over-all global strategy for smallpox eradication, says once a continent reports the last case of smallpox, we wait two years for hidden cases to emerge," Millar said. "At that point, if no cases have appeared, we send in a team of experts to certify the continent free."

He said the commission visited areas of Brazil and evaluated the country's surveilance system to determine whether the disease would have been detected had it occurred.

"Brazil had a highly endemic smallpox when they began an intensive nationwide eradication campaign in 1967," Dr. Millar said, "and in only about four years, with relatively little foreign aid, they eliminated it."

Millar said 81 million individual vaccinations were administered in the Brazilian campaign.

The WHO global eradication effort has eliminated the disease in all but four countries, Pakistan, India, Bangladesh and Ethiopia, he said.

TRANSPLANT DRUG TEST PROMISING

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The anti-rejection drug anti-lymphocyte globulin, ALG, may give heart and kidney transplant patients a longer lease on life by tempering the body's natural tendency to reject the new organ, especially during the critical two months after the operation.

Preliminary results of a cross-Canada clinical trial of the effectiveness of ALG suggests that the ALG treatment provides a "better qualitative result" than no treatment. This in turn may be reflected in longer-term survival, according to the co-ordinator of the trial, Dr. Harold Taylor of the Medical Research Council.

But at the same time, the results in the two years since the clinical trial began do not give doctors the conclusive results about ALG's effectiveness as hoped.

Specifically, the short-term survival rate of patients given ALG as an anti-rejection treatment and of patients not given ALG has so far proven to be about the same.

What is different and perhaps important is that some institutions involved in the study have reported significantly fewer rejection episodes in the critical first 60 days after transplantation among patients given ALG.

Executions Reported In Syria

DAMASCUS (AP) — The Syrian secret police have secretly executed 42 army officers following an attempt to assassinate President Hafez Assad, foreign diplomats in the Syrian capital report.

Syrian informants said about 60 officers disappeared after being arrested by the secret police, headed by Assad's brother, Col. Rifaat Assad.

The diplomats said the president was ambushed July 12 as he was touring northern Syria. His car was riddled by bullets, and a report published in Beirut said he was shot in the leg. Lebanese doctors who treated him at the time said they performed minor surgery to correct a leg inflammation.

The diplomats said the plotters were Sunni Moslems, the majority sect in Syria, who resent Assad's systematic promotion of Alawite Moslems to senior positions in the army. Assad is an Alawite, and the sect has come to dominate the ruling Baath Socialist party since he seized power in November, 1971.

Along with the arrests, the Assad brothers were reported to have instituted a widespread purge of Sunni Moslems among junior officers. The diplomats said no senior officers have been reported implicated in the assassination attempt.

Barrett's Plan 'Just Politics'

Premier Barrett probably was playing politics last week when he announced increased welfare benefits for senior citizens, Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde said in Ottawa Tuesday.

Lalonde was commenting on proposals of free prescription drugs for persons 65 and older and a lowering of the age, to 60 from 65, for recipients of B.C.'s guaranteed minimum monthly income program.

"Some of that has to do probably with the forthcoming byelection in the Okanagan more than with the real problems of poverty in Canada or in British Columbia," Lalonde said.

Barrett, when he announced his intentions last Thursday, said the federal health minister had been very receptive to the proposals.

Lalonde was asked whether Mr. Barrett's intention to do without federal help if necessary in implementing the new programs might be a deliberate ploy to embarrass Ottawa.

"Barrett seems to me to be pretty prone to making statements trying to add to his political stature . . . by berating others," he replied.

"I'm not going to embark on that game. I think this has more to do, as I said, with the forthcoming byelection . . . or the forthcoming session of the legislature in British Columbia.

"He said he would go ahead with it anyway, so good for him. I'm very happy for the people who will benefit."

Lalonde said he regretted B.C. had not followed the Canada Assistance Plan route, which would have benefitted other needy groups such as the handicapped and single mothers.

"I also deplore the fact that there had been no consultation whatever with us before taking such a step."

He said Norman Levi, B.C.'s human resources minister, had promised to negotiate any proposals before making an announcement.

"But, what we got this time was a telephone call at two o'clock that at six o'clock an announcement would be made with regard to certain welfare proposals."

ILLEGAL MOOSE PROVES COSTLY

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A Prince George man has lost his hunting licence and been fined $400 in what conservation officials say is the start of a crackdown on hunting offences.

Patrick Rusnak was stopped Saturday by a wildlife branch roadblock and when a dog sniffed his vehicle the remains of a moose-kill were found.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of game out of season.

In sentencing Rusnak, Judge J. H. Kenney said an unusually heavy hunting season is expected this year.

Conservation officials have warned there will be extensive checks made on hunters this year.

Fruit Hike Urged

PENTICTON (CP) — British Columbia Tree Fruits Ltd. should charge more for Okanagan fruit in order to increase returns to the orchardist, a spokesman for W. H. Malkin Ltd., a wholesale firm, said Tuesday.

Earl Coburn, manager of the company's Grandview Highway branch in Vancouver, told the B.C. legislature select standing committee on agriculture that B.C. Tree Fruits could have set a price for apricots this summer 20 cents above the price charged and still have sold the whole crop.

When asked how to increase returns to the orchardists, Coburn replied: "Charge more."

Coburn was asked if consumers will be willing to pay more.

"I do not think they will have much choice," he replied.

"Costs and wages are going up and people have more money with which to pay more for produce. People today earn more money than ever before."

Hugh Curtis, Conservative MLA for Saanich and the Island, suggested a proposal to charge more for Okanagan fruit is not constructive because the province's tree fruit industry is competing not only with similar fruit from other parts of the world but also with other fruits such as oranges and bananas.

SOCRED 'NEPOTISM' RAPPED BY LEVI

RUTLAND (CP) — Norma Levi, British Columbia human resources minister, said Tuesday night that "nepotism" practised by former premier W. A. C. Bennett is dangerous "because you don't know who's speaking — the monkey or the organ grinder."

Levi made his remarks to about 100 persons at a New Democratic Party rally for the Sept. 7 Okanagan South provincial byelection in which Bill Bennett is seeking to retain for Social Credit the seat his father held.

Land-Sale Claim Hit

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Chilcotin Outdoor Leisure Ltd., a firm that promotes the sale of property in the British Columbia Interior, has been charged with two counts of false advertising.

Paul Clifford Northcott, 42, entered no plea when he appeared in provincial court Tuesday and was remanded to Sept. 4.

A date will be set for trial at that time.

The Crown alleges that Northcott advertised the sale of 267,000 acres of land in the Chilcotin area. The advertising was misleading, it claims.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A UBC archeological team digging on the Musqueam Indian reserve has turned up artifacts almost 3,000 years old. A spokesman said these are the oldest perishable items uncovered on B.C.'s northwest coast.

★

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Mayor Harold Moffat and two of the three men involved said Tuesday there was nothing wrong in three top city consultants attending a secret city council session deciding the future of an area which included land owned by a company in which the consultants are shareholders.

PEMBERTON (CP) — Ian Forbes, chairman of the Pemberton district hospital committee, said Tuesday that Health Minister Dennis Cocke has turned down the committee's request for a 10-bed hospital. The minister told him there was no chance of Pemberton having its own hospital for at least five years, Forbes said.

★

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal Conservative caucus committee on the environment will hold public hearings in Vancouver Sept. 12 and in Victoria Sept. 13 to acquaint MPs with environmental problems, it was announced Tuesday.

Hail Toll Tallied

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — The Emergency Measures Organization has been asked to assist a special session of city council in assessing damage from this week's severe hailstorm.

Mayor Allan Bailey said damage to crops and buildings in the Yorkton area is about $2 million.

A church-operated school and a number of homes under construction or recently completed were damaged in southwest Yorkton.

Several blocks of the downtown area were flooded and 18 families whose homes were flooded or damaged were placed in hotels and motels.

Schools Unused

EDMONTON (CP) — Although unused school space costs the government millions of dollars each year, funds to build new schools are still being approved, Education Minister Lou Hyndman said.

The minister was commenting on an interim report from the School Buildings Board which said that Alberta schools could accommodate 97,000 more students than the 420,000 expected to register next week.

More than $12 million a year, or $250 million in the next 20 years, is expected to be spent on unused school building and grounds space.

Bread Probe Set

WINNIPEG (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ian Turnbull has announced appointments to a three-member board to investigate proposed increases in the price of bread in Manitoba.

Major bakeries in Manitoba have been asked to postpone any bread price increases until the board reports at the end of October. The bakeries have given no indication of how big the proposed increases may be.

MD Testing Urged

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Doctors should be required to re-establish their medical competence every few years, Dr. James Oshiro, president of the Alberta Medical Association said Monday.

An association committee is currently studing the question and is expected to make an interim report to the AMA annual meeting next month.

$11.5M Backs U.K. Airliner

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government put up $11.5 million today to back a new British airliner, the H.S.146, designed for short-haul routes.

The builders, Hawker-Siddeley Aviation, say they can sell about 400 of the aircraft around the world.

The wide-bodied plane will seat between 71 and 88 passengers on routes up to 1,200 miles. It is designed to replace the turbine-propeller Viscount aircraft still used on many "feeder" lines.

The first H.S. 146 flight is planned for January, 1976, with entry into regular service in 1977. Hawker-Siddeley says its operating costs will be 15 or 20 per cent below those of other short-haul jets.

The company will put up a similar sum for development and the government's contribution will be repaid from a levy on sales. Each H.S. 146 will cost about $3.75 million.

Gas Shortage Chances Ebb

TORONTO (CP) — Gasoline shortages may occur in some areas of Canada during the next year but chances are quite small and getting smaller, Donald Morgan of the oil policy branch of the department of energy, mines and resources told a meeting of the Toronto Transit Commission Tuesday.

He said areas that would be affected first by shortages might include central and western Ontario, Vancouver and the B.C. Lower Mainland.

Morgan said new refineries are being built and old ones expanded and Canadian crude oil will supply all Canadian refineries by 1975, making imports unnecessary.

THE TRAVELS OF NANCY

CASHMERE, Wash. (AP) — Her travels took her from Los Angeles north to Canada, then south again through northeastern Washington towards Yakima and Ellensburg.

They buried her, with a minister and three others in attendance, late last week. Her name was Nancy, authorities say.

She died in a Blewett Pass auto accident Aug. 16

Nancy was between 17 and 18, of medium height with hazel eyes and dark brown hair worn in pigtails.

She was hitchhiking from Washington towards Yakima when two Seattle youths — Conrad Marsh, 17, and Daniel Cornelissen, 19 — picked her up. Nancy and Marsh died when they were thrown from the car as it overturned.

She told the two she was coming from somewhere near Winthrop and wanted to see friends she had visited before in Yakima.

She carried only a pack. In it, authoriteis found a handwritten, illustrated letter Nancy wrote to her mother.

"I am in northeast Washington on the land that the Wolfs live on," she wrote. "There is a pond to swim in down the road and aspen trees that shine. This place is pretty nice, down home kind of feeling."

A Crawford, B.C., address found written on a slip of paper in Nancy's pack was checked by the RCMP. an elderly woman at the address said she once gave Nancy a ride. She said the two picked cherries together one afternoon. Nancy, the woman said, seemed depressed. The woman advised her to return home to her parents, and Nancy said she would.

the best part of SUMMER

fresh B.C. Pears

Good things come in pears . . . especially in golden-good, new crop B.C. Bartlett Pears. Fresh, juicy Bartletts add a delicious, sunshine taste to cereals, salads and so many good tasting summer desserts . . . like this easy-to-make party pie.

CHILLED PEAR WAFER PIE

1 package (3 oz.) strawberry or raspberry jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
¼ teaspoon almond flavouring
3 fresh B.C. Pears
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup whipped cream or,
1 packet whipped topping
½ cup diced fresh B.C. Pears
Vanilla wafers

Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water; cool. Add almond flavouring, chill until jelly begins to set. Beat with rotary beater until fluffy throughout. Meanwhile, peel, halve, and core pears; sprinkle with lemon juice. Whip cream until stiff, or prepare whipped topping according to package directions. Fold into beaten jelly with diced pears. Line bottom and sides of a buttered 9-inch jelly plate with vanilla wafers. Fill with jelly mixture. Place pear halves carefully on top, arranging in spoke fashion. Chill. Serves 6-8.

And try these jiffy pear ideas for summer, too:

- Fill fresh pear halves (dipped quickly in lemon juice) with mint jelly and serve with lamb.
- Fold chopped pears into ginger-flavoured whipped cream. Chill and serve.

WITH HELP SABLE CAN BE STABLE

HALIFAX (CP) — There is no need for Sable Island to disappear into the sea, a victim of wind erosion, says biology professor Ian McLaren of Dalhousie University.

"Taken care of, Sable Island can become stable," he said. "There is no need for it to disappear. Such islands can grow."

Dr. McLaren told a meeting of the Mining Society of Nova Scotia here that the island had suffered for hundreds of years from man's impact, but now is in a position to be repaired.

He said that the proliferation of roads on the delicately balanced island is a danger. When the grass is broken by tire tracks the sand is exposed, accelerating erosion.

"Some places which were narrow roads in 1952 now are wide expanses of drifting sand," he said.

The need to prevent drifting of the sands of which the island is built was also stressed by Lorne Walker of Calgary, the environment officer for Mobil Oil Canada Ltd.

Mobil, which uses 140 miles of the province's coast as a drilling platform, was the first company to strike oil in the massive exploration program being carried out by several companies off the east coast.

He said all employees sent to Sable Island are asked not to walk on the grass which binds the sand dunes together.

They are also briefed on the locations of seal breeding grounds and bird nesting sites. The precautions are necessary because with up to 90 people on the island "they could upset a reasonably delicate balance of nature."

Mr. Walker said that 12,000 feet of snow fences were erected between the dunes last fall as an experiment to stabilize the sands.

The experiment was only partially successful because not all the fences were properly positioned and horses had used them occasionally as rubbing posts in a terrain devoid of trees.

But he said the sand had started to fill in the fences as planned.

Dr. MacLaren said the island supported 2,000 head of cattle in the 18th century, when its partial cover of soil was ploughed in an attempt to grow farm produce. Then the wind eroded the thin soil cover away except for a few small patches that remain.

The horses have been on the island since 1783, he said. With the hand of man removed from their breeding, the horses have reverted to a more primitive stock.

Weak horses die in the winter, he said. Last year, about 100 died, leaving 200 to 250 in the self-regulated population.

Affluence Takes Toll of a Sect

ROSTHERN, Sask. (CP) — "I could forbid my boys to play organized sports on Sunday," says Ed Enns, a Mennonite farmer.

"But it wouldn't do me any good."

It was hardship and persecution that knit the followers of Menno Simons, strengthened their resolve, and saw them through the stormy period following the Russian revolution.

They later brought their faith and tenacity with them when they migrated to Canada to escape persecution.

Yet where persecution failed, affluence may be taking its toll.

"I don't think we are as strict with our children as our parents were with us," Mr. Enns says. "It would have been unthinkable for us to have played any organized sport. It would have been acceptable for us to go out into the pasture and play around with a ball, but organized sport—no."

WERE RESTRICTED

Although some Mennonites migrated from Europe to Canada as early as the later part of the 19th century, it was 50 years ago that an exodus from Russia began because the Communist regime placed restrictions on them.

They now number 15,000 in Saskatchewan.

Under Catherine the Great, the Mennonites were offered tremendous concesssions to settle Russia's vast but undeveloped farmland.

The Mennonite colonies in Russia flourished as they supplied the demands for foreign and domestic wheat.

They importedf purebred horses from Holland along with cattle and sheep and had established 70 steam-powered flour mills before the revolution.

The fall from grace after the revolution is a vivid memory to Peter Wiens who says revolution and persecution were facts of life when he was 17 years old.

Now editor of Der Bote (The Messenger) he says his people tried desperately to adjust to the situation before deciding to emigrate for Canada.

FORBADE CHURCHES

"Churches were forbidden to instruct young people and the children in the faith of their parents and Mennonite ministers were not allowed to preach."

Mr. Wiens says his parents lived in continual fear of robbery and murder. Anarchists had been known to raid some villages, taking anything of value and raping and murdering on their way.

"Some people were taken out into the night and brutally beaten or shot," he recalls.

His father's memory of one beating was so vivid that years later when horses would come into the yard at night, he would tremble with fear, Mr. Wiens says.

From 1923 to 1930 about 25,000 Mennonites fled Russia, about 21,000 of them emigrating to Canada where they were accepted by members of their faith already in this country.

RECOGNIZED BIBLE

It was in 1537 that the Mennonites broke away from the established religions of the day. They recognized the Bible and the enlightened conscience, limited baptism to the believer and stressed those precepts which vindicated the sanctity of human life and a man's word.

The Mennonites have not been entirely successful in preserving their pastoral way of life, says Olga Heinrichs, a teacher in the Rosthern area for many years.

There is a relentless process of assimilation, she says, which cannot be stopped.

Third-generation Mennonites now are speaking English almost to the exclusion of the native German tongue.

In the years past, the people worked hard on the land and the social life centred on the church, says Mrs. H. T. Klassen of Rosthern.

The family circle had been close even when children left the farm for work elsewhere.

LARGEST PLASTICS SHIP — HMS 'Wilton', the world's largest glass reinforced plastics vessel, has recenlty been completed by a shipyard in southern England. She is a 450-ton minehunter built as a prototype to evaluate the use of plastics for countermeasures against mines.

Northern MP Wins Goal, But Hates It

BAKER LAKE, N.W.T. (CP) — Wally Firth is the first native northerner ever elected to Parliament but he might not run again.

"This has been the worst year that I've ever spent in my life," says the stocky, brush-cut Metis who won the vast Northwest Territories riding for the NDP last Oct. 30.

Running again will depend on when a new election is called, says Firth.

"I don't enjoy being an MP at all. I didn't expect to. But I have an obligation to serve a decent length of time."

The 38-year-old Fort McPherson native says he achieved his principal goal election night by winning a House of Commons seat, "proving a northerner could do it."

"I wanted to encourage others and I think I've done that. Now I'd like to see some of them give it a try."

With a minority Parliament an election could come anytime, but if none is called before the end of 1974, Firth says he's "almost certain" he'll quit federal politics.

"I'd have to make a final decision when the time comes . . . but I don't want to hang around Ottawa too damn long."

If it comes before the end of next year, he says he'd "pretty well have to run again . . . even though I don't want to."

He became both the first native and the first NDP candidate to win a northern seat in Parliament.

"I got a lot of satisfaction out of that," he said during an interview in this Eskimo settlement 1,000 miles north of Winnipeg.

But he dislikes the weather in Ottawa, the confinement of city life, the bureaucratic atmosphere and the frustrations that confront all MPs trying to look after their constitutents.

The first thing to disillusion him after arriving was the all-party tradition of heckling that goes on during Commons proceedings.

"It's crazy as hell. It doesn't help anyone or contribute a damn thing."

But he has no personal complaints against any individual MP. In his own party, he says many members have gone out of their way to encourage him, including NDP Leader David Lewis.

A grade-school dropout who completed his education by correspondence, he entered politics after working as a Hudson Bay Company clerk and manager, radio announcer, game warden and native organizer.

Tests Opposed

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Anti-Vivisection Society has filed suit to prevent the purchase of 200 beagle puppies it said would be used in testing environmental impact of aviation pollutants.

Author Attacks Soviet Ploys

SOLZHENITSYN
. . . bitter attack

Washington Post

MOSCOW — Judging by his latest interview, Alexander Solzhenitsyn's frame of mind has changed dramatically during the last 17 months.

The Kremlin will not return to repressions such as the Stalin purges of the 1930s, he told two Western correspondents in Moscow, since Western protests and the lofty behavior of Soviet dissidents will prevent it.

But if he should be killed, it would be the work inspiration of the security police, he said.

Early in 1972 the writer gave a long interview to the Washington Post and The New York Times in which he described a campaign "to suffocate me" by Soviet officials. Then he spoke in a calm, matter-of-fact tone about the difficulties he faced in his work, and about a propaganda campaign against him.

★ ★ ★

Solzhenitsyn talked almost exclusively about himself in that interview, and his criticisms of the Soviet regime all related to its treatment of him. He avoided answering questions that would have drawn him into general commentaries on the situation in this country. He was careful to discuss only events and situations that involved him personally.

This new interview is different in tone and substance. The matter-of-fact language is gone, replaced by bitter denunciations, some oozing with sarcasm. Though part of the interview concerns his own problems, much of it had nothing to do with himself.

★ ★ ★

For the first time, Solzhenitsyn has spoken up for most of the major personalities associated with active Soviet dissidence in recent years. By name he defended Andrei Sakharov, the atomic physicist; Zhores Medvedev, the biologist recently deprived of his Soviet citizenship; Andrei Amalrik, the imprisoned writer; Gen. Pyotr Grigorekno, held in a mental hospital; Vladimir Bukovsky, another imprisoned activist; and others.

On the Sovet practice of lifting the citizenship of prominent dissidents allowed to travel abroad, he said:

★ ★ ★

"Citzenship in our country is not an inalienable natural right for every human being born on its soil. But it is a kind of coupon which is kept by an exclusive clique of people who in no way and by nothing have proved that they have a greater right to the Russian soil.

"And this clique can, if it doesn't approve of some citizen's convictions, declare him deprived of his homeland. I leave it to you to find a word yourselves for such a social structure."

★ ★ ★

Until now Solzhenitsyn had taken the position that he should stand apart from the active dissidents, exploiting his special status as a writer who was once officially recognized as a great talent, and who enjoys an enormous international following.

With this interview he has abandoned that position and cast his lot with the other dissidents. He didn't explain why he changed his tactics, but he hinted at an explanation. "The Western world, by its publicity, has already helped save many of our oppressed," he observed, adding that specific people has received lighter sentences or other benefits because of the notoriety of their cases. It appears that Solzhenitsyn wanted to contribute to the publicity.

The atmosphere has changed in the last two years. Official pressure on Solhenitsyn and other intellectual nonconformists has increased. Their own loneliness is now more obvious, and more ominous. For the first time in this interview, Solzhenitsyn publicly implied that he is anxious about his own fate.

Dissidence Laid To Westerners

MOSCOW (WP) — Two defendants at a political trial in Moscow Tuesday attributed dissident activity in the Soviet Union to foreign influences, according to official accounts.

Pytor Yakir, 50, and Viktor Krassin, 44, said "there is no 'democratic movement' opposed to the authorities in the Soviet Union," according to Tass, the government news agency.

Yakir and Krassin — who admitted their guilt Monday, the first day of the trial, and who have been co-operatilng with the security police for months—said the idea of such a movement was "an invention of bourgeois propoganda," Tass reported.

According to Tass, both defendants agreed that "the program and tactical principles of the 'democratic movement' were tossed into the Soviet Union from the West, and then passed off by a number of foreign news agencies, newspapers and television companies as "ones originating in the Soviet Union."

Tass also released a letter attacking physicist Andrei Sakharov signed by 39 of his fellow members of the Soviet Academy of Science.

The letter says that Sakharov — principal developer of the Sovet H-bomb — has become "an instrument of hostile propanganda against the Soviet Union and other Socialist countries,"

However, a vast majority of the members of the academy did not sign the document. There were 39 signatures; the academy has more than 240 members.

Canoeing No Pleasure Cruise

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner and an assistant "suffered for (their) sins" on a two-day canoe trip up the Coppermine River last weekend, says the minister.

"If you don't treat (the river) with respect, you get pounded around. And we did."

The lanky, 40-year-old cabinet minister was taking time off from an information tour of the north by canoeing a 70-mile stretch of the river with three companions.

Most of the group's food was lost the first day when a canoe capsized.

The second day was filled with rapids but the men navigated without incident until early afternoon.

"And then we hit a stretch of calm water and I said there's no problem here," said Faulkner. "we started sort of looking around at the scenery and admiring everything and boom, we hit the rock."

Faulkner said he could see "terrible rapids ahead and if we had stuck with the canoe we would have been badly battered.

"So I said to Stu (special assistant Stu Iglesius) 'let the canoe go and we'll try to swim ashore.' And that was frightening, because we were really being swept down the river and we were trying to swim sideways to the ledge."

The pair finally grabbed hold of the ledge but its canoe and the group's food disappeared into the rapids.

Faulkner and Inglesius decided to walk the remaining distance to Coppermine, followed by the other canoe.

"We walked up the bluffs and down across that tundra and it was really wicked," said Faulkner. "It was tough because we were wet and it was cold and we didn't have any grub."

That night, one of the men used a fishing rod to catch a small grayling. "It was only a quarter of a fish for each of us and we hadn't eaten the day before so we were really hungry," said the minister.

"And I'll tell you, that little grayling was the best piece of fish I've ever had. And then we drank the water we boiled it in . . . it was delicious soup."

Temperatures approached freezing that night, and the four canoeists huddled together in the one tent that was left, with two sleeping bags covering them.

They left their campsite at 5 a.m. the next morning and reached Coppermine late in the day.

Nixon Feels Watergate Over

WASHINGTON POST

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — White House officials said Tuesday that President Nixon is convinced he has finally turned the corner on Watergate.

These officials said that Nixon is buoyed by the response to his press conference of last week and by recent polls supporting the president's view that he should put Watergate behind him. But they also described Nixon as concerned about mounting inflation. Particularly in food prices, which they said is the No. 1 problem facing the administration.

Alexander Haig, the president's chief of staff, said that the administration still believed that it could contain inflation. At the same time Haig warned that the administration must not make promises which it could not keep.

"I think it's important that we don't set for ourselves any claims that we can bring down food prices," Haig said.

Presidential counsellor Anne Armstrong, liaison for the administration with state Republican organization, described the economy as "the No. 1 issue."

In a series of interviews, some of them on-the-record and some on a not-for-attribution basis, White House officials shared the concern that the administration may be emerging from its Watergate crisis only to confront a dangerous inflationary situation.

They cited as reason for the optimism about Watergate the results of the most recent Harris Poll in which 62 per cent agreed that "it is time to turn the whole question of Watergate over to the courts and allow the president to concentrate on more important things." Also mentioned was the Opinion Research Corp. poll commissioned by the Republican national committee in which 53 per cent of those polled favored stopping the Senate hearing and turning the issue over to the courts.

AUDIT CLEAN: FIRM

NEW YORK (WP) — Officials of the accounting firm that audited President Nixon's real estate transactions in California and Florida said Tuesday they are confident their report gives an accurate picture of the dealings.

They said the presidential pardon given three former associates last December played no part in their selection to conduct this audit.

Two officers of Coopers and Lybrand, one of the country's largest accounting firms, said they were surprised last month when they were approached to conduct the audit, but decided there was no reason to disqualify the firm.

On Monday, the Western White House released the auditors' report, which showed that the president was able to buy a 25.5-acre property in San Clemente, Calif., chiefly because of loans from Robert Abplanalp and that he sold the bulk of the property to an investment company owned by Abplanalp and C. G. (Bobo) Rebozo. Both of those men are long-time friends and supporters of President Nixon.

Questions were raised about the report because last December, the president unconditionally pardoned three former associates of the Coopers firm. The three — one general partner, on partner and one senior associate — had been convicted of fraud in connection with Continental Vending Corp. The three were fined a total of 17,000 dollars but were not sentenced to any time in prison.

U.S. to Curb Oil Conversion In Power Plants

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon has taken his first big step toward mandatory controls on scarce fuels by proposing that power plants and other big coal users be barred from switching to petroleum.

The proposal, announced by White House energy chief John Love, is designed to ease the shortage of home heating oil and would result in dirtier air in some areas of the country.

Love stressed the air would not be allowed to get so dirty that public health would be endangered in violation of the "primary" standards in the Clean Air Act.

Power plants and factories have been burning more heating oil in recent years to meet clean air rules. This has cut into the supply formerly destined for backyard tanks and figured in predictions of a heating oil shortage this winter.

The White House's proposed rule would halt further switches to heating oil or lower sulfur fuel than that now in use — unless public health demanded it.

A White House energy official said the rule would become effective as of Monday unless something highly unexpected developed at hearings set for Sept. 6 and 7.

Although a court suit by some environmental group against the rule is always a possibility, administration officials doubted this would be forthcoming. Said one: "They are politically realistic enough to realize they cannot ask New England to go cold this winter."

The White House rule would stay in effect for one year and override any state rules that required a switch to low sulfur fuel oils as part of the effort to clean up the air.

Besides forbidding further switching from coal to oil, the proposed rule sets forth how oil supplies shall be allocated — basing distribution on 1972 use — and restricts the blending of home heating oil with residual oil.

Love said the quota system in the proposed rule is designed "to meet essential needs in certain parts of the country and to insure an adequate supply to the independent distributors and marketers . . ."

The oil industry's American Petroleum Institute called the White House proposal "reasonable as well as necessary in view of the tight fuel supply situation we will face this winter."

Laurence Moss, president of the Sierra Club which has been a leader in the environmentalists' fight for clean air, said the White House rule means some delays in the clean-up drive but added "We're willing to be flexible" on such short-term postponements.

No Slump In '74: Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon is confident there will be no recession next year and does not contemplate a tax increase, according to a White House spokesman.

Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said Tuesday the chief executive is confident that government-sponsored economic policies and budgetary restraints "will bring inflation down to reasonable levels."

The president is "of course concerned about the inflationary situation," Warren told reporters.

But he pointed out that Nixon's chief economic advisers, including treasury secretary George Shultz and Herbert Stein, chairman of the council of economic advisers, "feel strongly a balanced budget can be achieved this year and that would obviously negate any need for a tax increase this year."

Nixon promised in the last election campaign there would be no federal tax boost.

He has spent some of his working hours at the Western White House reviewing the status of the economy.

Asked whether the president is confident there will be no recession next year, Warren replied: "yes."

He explained that Nixon feels price stability will return and the over-all economic situation will improve "because of the work being done by all segments of the government, including the budget restraints on future planning."

Meanwhile, the bill to increase the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2.20 per hour was at the White House awaiting action by the president.

They'll Insure Anything

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Dancers can insure their toes, bearded men their prized face-foliage, whisky distillers their sense of smell—someone, somewhere in the London insurance market, can be found to take on the oddest risks.

Most of the offbeat inquiries, in fact, end up in the 340-foot-long Underwriting Room of Lloyd's, the famed old insurance market which started in a Georgian coffee-house and now handles more than £700 million ($1.75 billion) in premiums every year.

Although there are some 300 independent companies outside Lloyd's—some specializing in unusual fields like ecclesiastical insurance, works of art or the weather—most of the "one-off" commissions come to Lloyd's because the big companies, with shareholders to consider, are unwilling to take them on.

INSURE MONSTER

Lloyd's underwriters—7,000 of them in 300 syndicates—are more able to quote, say, on the risk of someone producing the Loch Ness monster to claim a prize. Indeed, they had a lot of fun drawing up specifications of the monster for that policy.

Lloyd's, which took the brunt of the £1 million (then about $5 million) insurance on the wreck of the Titanic in 1912, and reputedly was involved in something like $100 million of the losses on the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, will cheerfully quote for such things as insuring a marked Pacific salmon against getting caught in a Nanaimo, B.C. fishing contest.

Their enterprising underwriters have insured a troupe of performing fleas, a belly dancer's navel, the beards of 40 Derbyshire club members and actor Oliver Reed's eyebrows—he was shaving them off for a movie role and claimed that if they grew back too big they would affect his appearance and earning power.

DECLARE OWN RISK

Underwriters live up to their name by doing just that—they write their name under the amount of risk they are prepared to back with their own cash. A broker may approach several underwriters before he amasses the required amount of cover.

Risk of financial loss to the insured person is always the major factor involved in policies. Thus, a broadcaster who tried to insure his newly-regained sense of smell was turned down—it wouldn't affect his earning power, insurance men said. But a perfume maker and a whisky distiller obtained similar policies.

Show business folk have traditionally found it shrewd from a publicity as well as a practical viewpoint to insure various limbs, starting with the great French music-hall star Mistinguett and her "million-dollar legs." Ballet star Rudolf Nureyev has his insured for £190,00 ($475,000).

VALUED DIMPLES

In the silent-screen era, melodrama heroine Pearl White even insured her dimples for £6,500 each. And when Elvis Presley swallowed a cap off one of his teeth during a particularly convulsive rock number, Lloyd's paid out £1,000 for the delay while emergency dental work was carried out.

One of the oddest show-biz policies was taken out by actor Norman Vaughan, who insured against forgetting his lines at the opening of the farce Boeing Boeing. He had to agree, among other things, not to take any alcohol for three days and nights beforehand and to be in bed each night by 11 p.m.

The most bizarre contingencies come naturally to an underwriter's mind. When a killer whale, caught off Canada's west coast, was being towed to a Seattle aquarium, Lloyd's insured it for $8,000 against various contingencies—including rescue attempts by other whales.

BACKED VIRGINITY

Several British insurance companies backed nervously away from the Sicilian father who some years ago wanted to insure his 16-year-old daughter's virginity until the time of her marriage. Eventually one company did take on the commission, charging the equivalent of $1.60 a week for cover of $1,425.

An enterprising Birmingham broker devised a policy for men to insure against their fiancees running off with continental Romeos while on holiday. He charged a premium of £7 ($17.50) per $500 ($1,250) for girls aged 17 to 25. Ungallantly, the premium was reduced for those aged 25 to 30.

One British company, Eagle Star, has for 50 years virtually cornered the market in weather insurance. They call it their "Pluvius" department, after the Roman rain-god Jupiter Pluvius, and their policies will cover you against financial loss from rained-out garden parties, sporting events or holidays in most parts of the world afflicted by uncertain weather.

Kissinger Visit

BONN (Reuter) — Henry Kissinger has accepted an invitation to visit his German birthplace next month, city officials at Fuerth said. The officials said Kissinger will be awarded the city's highest decoration, the gold citizens medal, for his services for world peace.

BEER SALES BOOMING

TORONTO (CP) — The sweltering August temperatures have created a boom in beer sales.

Brewers' Warehousing Co. reports sales are the best ever in the 90 beer stores in Metropolitan Toronto.

However, doctors are not convinced cold beer really cools you off.

"A cold beer is OK, but larger doses of alcohol just produce more body heat," said Dr. Stephen Kandel of Sunnybrook Hospital.

He advises heat sufferers to wear loose, comfortable clothing and drink lots of fluids to replace those lost through perspiration.

Toronto is recording its hottest August in 14 years and the temperature is expected to top 90 degrees again today.

High Monday was 91.

Chicken Salad Longboy
A Hearty Sandwich Idea

A "zingy" sandwich suggestion, just in time for the holiday weekend! Forget about fiddly individual sandwiches — make a giant loaf in much less time. Salad plate favorites come packaged in a sliced French loaf, that's easily chopped into serving size pieces. Keep refrigerated until ready to serve.

- 2 cups diced cooked chicken
- 1 cup diced celery
- ½ cup chopped cucumber
- ⅓ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- ⅓ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tbsp. prepared mustard
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 1 tsp. salt
- ⅛ tsp. pepper
- 1 medium size French loaf
- — soft butter
- — mayonnaise
- — lettuce leaves
- 6 slices cooked ham
- 8 slices Canadian proc. cheese
- 8 cherry tomatoes
- 8 olives

Combine chicken, celery, cucumber and green pepper; toss lightly. Mix together sour cream, mayonnaise, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, salt and pepper; add to chicken mixture and toss lightly. Slice bread lengthwise horizontally into three even slices. Spread with soft butter. Spread bottom slice with mayonnaise and cover with lettuce leaves. Arrange ham and cheese on top. Spread second bread slice with chicken filling. Place tomatoes and olives on skewers, stick into loaf to mark individual servings. Slice through loaf before serving. Makes 8 servings.

RIGHTS DATE FETED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A feminist author says opponents of women's rights have used "Watergate-typt sabotage" against the women's movement.

Betty Friedan spoke this week to about 200 persons marking the 54th anniversary of women's suffrage in the United States.

They placed red roses at a statue of three of the suffrage movement's most famous leaders: Susan Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

The group endured smoggy 91-degree heat listening to almost an hour of speeches outside the Capitol.

Ms. Friedan said those seeking to prevent ratification of the federal Equal Rights Amendment had used "Watergate-type sabotage" against the women's movement, which lent its backing to the measure. She cited no names.

After women's groups emerged as a significant political factor "we had saboteurs, stolen lists, doctored records, whole bunches of dirty tricks."

"Meetings in state after state were immobilized or disrupted by a strange pattern, which sowed suspicion, alienation, polarization, paralysed leadership, prevented action from taking place.

"I called it at the time an 'invisible brake' and before we knew about Watergate it made no political sense."

John Gardner, chairman of Common Cause, a citizen action group, said the Equal Rights Amendment is essential to end discrimination.

The amendment has been approved by 30 of the 38 states necessary for ratification.

Fat Theory Disputed

CHICAGO (UPI) — Cholestorol and saturated fats may actually prolong life instead of shortening it, as previously believed, an Ohio medical researcher told newsmen at the American Chemical Society meeting this week.

Dr. Teh Huang, doctor of veterinary medicine, said there is not proof that low blood cholesterol will prolong life expectancy nor any proof that diet, saturated fat or cholesterol show any relationship with cholesteremia or coronary disease.

"But evidences have accumulated to show that unsaturated fat causes more cancer in humans and animals and that low blood cholesterol is a fatal syndrome in many human diseases," he said.

Huang said he conducted experiments for more than 15 years, feeding rats diets containing cholesterol and saturated fats. He said in the experiment, using four feeding programs, he found that rats fed a diet containing bulk saturated fats and cholesterol lived longest while rats fed unsaturates with cholesterol had the shortest life span.

However, Huang reported "a trace of cholesterol in the 10 per cent saturated diet seems to be essential to the normality of growth, longevity and especially resistance to infection.

"The beneficial effects of the cholesterol supplement to saturated fat were more significant in the males than in the femals," Huang said.

"The bood cholesterol level in man increases after the fourth decade whereas that of a woman increases continuously. A supplement of cholesterol to men may prolong their lives, allowing them to live as long as women," he said, noting that women have a longer life expectancy than men.

Huang, who is with the Timken Mercy Hospital, Canton, Ohio and the president of the East Central Ohio District of the American Heart Association, said he believes a person could eat as many as seven eggs a week without danger of impairing his health. Previous researchers have advised people to restrict their intake to two eggs per week.

Design Course

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial design is such a little known field that most Canadians have to leave the country to get their training or move into the area from graphic design or engineering.

Carleton University in Ottawa plans to fill the gap by offering a degree in industrial design.

The first of a minimum 100 students are to enrol this fall.

Sale of Babies On Big Scale

By NICK COLE

LONDON (FWF) — From the outset, it was more than just a routine "missing persons" equiry. After all, newborn babies do not vanish in large numbers. And this is precisely what was happening in Rio de Janeiro.

Health officials thought their calculation of the birth-rate must be to blame; so to check their sums, if nothing more, they set out to investigate the disappearances — disappearances that could not be explained by the city's crime or natural death figures. They rapidly concluded that the infants were deliberately being disposed of in an organized fashion.

But until the day, earlier this year, when they called at a flat in the suburbs of Rio, they had little idea of the scale.

In the apartment they found a Swedish woman with several babies. Under questioning the woman admitted she was making arrangements to send the babies to new parents overseas. What is amounted to was the discovery by the authorities of an international baby-smuggling ring. In this case, at least 30 babies had been sent overseas, mainly to Scandinavia. The woman was allowed to leave Brazil.

Yet the the baby-trafficking is not confined to South America and Scandinavia. Reports have shown the growth of a very lucrative and widespread "black market" stretching from many parts of Europe to North America.

Room at the Inn—A Ritual Pursuit

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (N.Y.T.) — "Do you have a room for tonight?" the rumpled father asks wearily.

"For how many?" the desk clerk replies knowingly.

Out in the car a rumpled mother, three rumpled children and a rumpled dog watch intently. When the father reaches for a pen to fill out a form, a soft cheer seeps from the station wagon.

Everyone begins gathering up coloring books, dolls, handbags, toy pistols and swim suits. And another motel room is rented.

It is a ritual as old as the automobile itself: North Americans on the road in search of a night's lodging.

And across the land on these warm summer evenings during the peak vacation period, it is a ritual that is performed perhaps two million times a day, about once for every one of the 2,551,000 rooms in the 52,000 motels in the United States.

Here in New Mexico at the intersection of two major interstate highways, 1-40 and 1-25, the cars begin streaming down the cement exit ramps soon after 2 p.m.

For many travelers, a computer has already made their reservation and promised to bill them, even if they do not appear. In fact, the computer based in Omaha or Memphis or Phoenix has determined, in effect, how far each family will drive today.

The average vacationing family will drive a lot farther this summer than before the high-speed interstates stretched a day's travel from an exhausting 300 to a fairly easy 500 miles.

It does not matter to these travellers in search of some vacation Valhalla that seven years ago the land around here was a sandy waste beyond Albuquorque's limits.

Scouts for Holiday Inns knew that this property was destined to become, in effect, a new "transient town" dedicated to the needs not of those few who live here but of those thousands who pass through daily.

On Sept. 2, 1966, the interstates opened here. On Jan. 11, 1967, they began construction of a new motel. The motel opened on Oct. 1, 1968. It was followed by several other motels, truck stops and restaurants. And now just about anyone driving through this city passes by what the Holidex computer calls H.I. No. 126AB.

The result is an average annual occupancy rate of 98 to 99 per cent compared with the national average of 70 per cent and the break-even average of 60 per cent.

Long before the sun came up one recent day, the innkeeper, Murphy Jenkins, and his assistant, Jim Sanders, knew very well that they would have no vacancies for the coming night; for that matter, the next night and the next night.

In fact, Frank Cortese, the bellhop, knew he would make close to $30 in tips. And Joe Roloson, the bartender, knew he would sell a case of beer and a quart of vodka every hour. And Bennie Davis, the housekeeper, knew she would lose about 75 ashtrays and 50 towels and two families would forget luggage. And Sanders knew the morning mail would bring 10 keys that yesterday's guests had carried off.

The maids, 18 of the inn's ninety-six employees, were attacking each of the inn's 192 rooms, tossing the soiled linens and towels out the doors, emptying the trash, vacuuming the shag rugs and setting the partly used soap bars aside for charity.

The washing machines began to chew on the day's 550 sheets and 970 towels. Meanwhile, outside, the construction crews were working on an additional 108 rooms.

Khadafy's Strictures Keep Libya Sedate

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP) — "The Arab woman places her hand in that of the Arab man to achieve the historical action of the Arab masses in going from backwardness to progress," proclaims an editorial in a local newspaper.

That may be so in the abstract, but few yong couples are seen strolling hand-in-hand in this Mediterranean seaport. It's the kind of thing the authorities frown upon.

Instead, there are rows of young men sitting forlornly on the seafront or talking politics and eating sunflower seeds.

The drastic moral strictures of Libya's young leader, Col. Muammar Khadafy, seek to turn this Arab country into a teetotaling, thrifty, hard-working place where all Libyans are united in their struggle for a better future.

On the other hand, the country's huge oil wealth has rubbed off on many Libyans, and they evidently would like to enjoy the material benefits it can buy. The influx of Western goods brings with it the subtle attractions of Western mores.

There are no bars here. Khadafy banned alcohol in all its forms from the first days of his revolution in 1969.

Early this year, he forbade diplomats their monthly quota.

"Now we serve apricot juice, pineapple juice, soft drinks and bitter lemon at our receptions. They're not bad," said one Western diplomat drily.

Hairdressing salons for women are out. They all had to close under ordtrs from Khadafy.

But there are still a surprising number of foreign women who go about in the streets almost as they would at home.

The stares they arouse are anything but hostile.

Police Career Brief

DETROIT (AP) — "You are now a police officer," Commissioner John Nichols told Gale Aldridge Monday, three years after she was dismissed for refusing to pose as a prostitute.

"Commissioner," she said, "I'd like to resign."

Mrs. Aldridge was reinstated following a board of arbitration's decision which held the police department was too harsh when it dismissed her for her refusal. Reinstatement was recommended with full seniority but without back pay.

Mrs. Aldridge said she was bitter about the whole process.

"They didn't think that the loss of three year's work with $40,000 pay was too harsh."

"He (Nichols) would have dropped his drawers if he hadn't had a belt on," Mrs. Aldridge said of her instant resignation.

Tourniquet Use Ends

In the Radiology News Digest, I read that the use of the tourniquet (a band or a piece of rubber tubing used to shut off the circulation of the blood to an arm or leg) has been forbidden to the injured and bleeding.

Why? Because if it is put on too tight and left on too long, the tissues in the arm or leg can die, and then the limb may have to be amputated, in order to save the person's life. Naturally, the tissues cannot live without blood.

All of us should know the dangers of using a tourniquet. I have before me on my desk two excellent books, on the subject of first aid; the first is "Standard First Aid and Personal Safety," and the second is "Advanced First Aid and Emergency Care." The books have been released by the Red Cross.

I read in the first volume, regarding the tourniquet, "The use of a tourniquet is dangerous, and the tourniquet should be used only for a severe, life-threatening hemorrhage that cannot be controlled by other means. Tourniquets are used far too often and are rarely required."

Pressure of the fingers on the bleeding artery may save the person's life.

The two first aid books are full of very instructive pictures showing bandaging and repair of arteries. These booklets should be invaluable for policemen and others who often have to deal with injured persons. The books could be very useful also in the library of many a family full of children.

I read that since 1910, more than 33 million copies of first-aid textbooks have been distributed by the Red Cross. That they are needed is shown by the fact that each year in the United States, some 115,000 lives are lost through accidents, and 51 million persons are injured at a cost to the nation of $29 billion a year.

There is much material on a wide range of information on injuries, illnesses and emergency care, much of it never before covered in Red Cross textbooks. The books are published by Doubleday and Company, Inc., Garden City, N.Y.

BED TIME SNACK?

Some people think that a snack at bedtime will make them sleep better; others disagree. Recently, researchers in Milwaukee studied 36 volunteers who, for a week, ate a snack before they went to bed, and then, for the next week, they took no snack. They couldn't see any difference in their sleep under the two conditions, and neither could the observers who kept track of the people as they slept.

Nutritious Pastry Ends Qualms

By HILDA BEASTALL

By producing a pastry which has food value cooked into it we are in the happy position of being able to enjoy fruit and vegetable pies and pie-lets without the lurking suspicion that the filling is the only good part.

At this season when box lunches are again looming as a feature task for homemakers with school-age children, why not become familiar with two methods of pastry making which ensure good food as well as convenience, eye appeal and taste satisfaction?

One day out of the five school days give the youngsters the treat of a pastry covered individual pie-let of fruit or of vegetables combined with brown rice, soybeans and lentils for long lasting nutrituion.

LEMON JUICE PASTRY

This recipe does away with baking powder, and the combination of unbleached flour, wheat germ and brewer's yeast ensures a pastry with good flavor added to a texture which is short and tender.

3 c. unbleached flour.
1 Tbsp. brewer's yeast.
1 tsp. salt.
3 Tbsp. wheat germ.
¾ c. soft margarine.
1 slightly beaten egg.
3 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice.
¼ c. ice cold water (approx.)

Sift together flour, yeast and salt, add wheat germ. Fork in soft margarine. Add egg lightly beaten with lemon juice. Include pulp with juice. Add enough water to bind dough into ball.

Roll thin on floured board or waxed paper. Cut out to size of individual pies, or cut to squares or circles and fold over after putting on the fruit or vegetable filling. Seal edges. You get in more filling by using small foil baking dishes, and they are reusable.

Unbaked dough will keep in refrigerator or freezer, wrapped closely in waxed paper.

Pastry from Yeast Dough. This receipe was worked out after reading about Czech buns with a hollow poked in the centre and filled with raisin or date mixture before baking. This is quite unconventional but we liked the results, firm enough to pack in a lunchbox.

1 tsp. molasses or brown sugar.
1 pkt. (1 Tbsp) yeast.
½ c. hot water (second amount).
½ c. powdered skim milk.
2 Tbsp. soft margarine.
1 tsp. salt.
2 small eggs beaten.
1 ¾c. dark rye flour.
1¼ c. unbleached flour.

Put water into large warm bowl. Stir in sugar, spinkle yeast on surface. Let stand in warm place 10 minutes, then stir.

Meanwhile combine hot water, margarine, salt and powdered skim milk in another bowl. Stir until dissolved and no longer hot but still warm. Stir this mixture into the yeast. Add lightly beaten eggs and 1¼ c. unbleached flour. Beat with wooden spoon until smooth.

Stir in 1¾ c. dark rye flour to make soft dough. Knead for few minutes on floured board. Place in greased bowl, cover and set to rise in warm place, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Stir down. Roll a portion out on floured board to ¼-inch thickness. Cut with 2½ inch cutter. Place 2 inches apart on greased baking sheets. Cover, and let rise until doubled, 1 hour.

Then press a hollow in centre of each, leaving a rim. Fill with a raisin or date mixture.

Bake in 400 degs. oven for 10 to 15 minutes, but do not allow to burn. Cool on wire racks.

The same dough, rolled to ½-inch thickness, cut with a 2½-inch cutter, and baked after rising without the hollow, makes lovely tender-crust buns to eat warm wih cheese, or butter.

Egg, Poultry Promoter Keeps Hatching Jobs

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Dorothy Batcheller probably knows more about eggs than chickens and biologisas.

For more than 20 years she has travelled about 20,000 miles a year; dropping in at newspapers, radio and television stations to promote eggs, chickens and turkey for the Poultry Products Institute of Canada.

This year she retired for the second time in her life. The retirement lasted about a month.

The institute, found in 1950, will be superseded by provincial marketing boards which will take over its information and promotion functions.

Mrs. Batcheller has already agreed to join the Ontario poultry marketing board as its home economics consultant.

She began her career in poultry a few months after the Poultry Products Institute was formed when she and her husband moved here from Ottawa where she had retired from the federal agriculture department.

That retirement lasted nearly a year.

Since joining the institute, she has compiled 10 cookbooks and produced uncounted editions of Poultry Patter, the institute's newsletter.

With each edition, she included a brief note about herself and her travels. Over the years, these notes hav built up country wide network of friends.

Canadian Poultryman says she has done "more to promote the consumption of eggs and poultry than any other person in this country."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Last November I became engaged. I was so excited at the time that I asked a girl I work with (I'll call her "Mazie") to be one of my bridesmaids. I had seen Mazie only at work, but never outside the office.

Now that I know her better, I am very sorry I asked her to be a bridesmaid. She gets drunk and talks dirty. She is very loud and extremely pushy where men are concerned.

Worse yet, my fiance can't stand her. He's afraid she will ruin our wedding with her drinking and dirty mouth.

To give you an idea of what kind of girl Mazie is, she keeps telling me she hopes the bridesmaid's gown will be plenty sexy so she can show off her "38s."

How can I get rid of her politely? Or am I stuck with her? Second Thoughts.

DEAR SECOND: There is no way you can get rid of her "politely," which means either you are stuck with her, or you will have to get rid of her impolitely.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing for suggestions on what to do about a husband who is in the armed forces, stationed in Missouri. He doesn't feel that it's necessary to keep in touch.

I've asked him to write: He's too "busy." I've asked him to phone: It's too expensive.

Since he doesn't bother writing to me, I didn't write to him, so finally after a long silence, he called me. When I tried to explain why I hadn't written he wouldn't listen.

I am employed full time and have two children to look after. I told him I worry when I get no word from him, and his response was: "If I die, the service will inform you."

What do you suggest! — Letterless

DEAR LETTERLESS: Quit playing tit for tat, and write to him whether you hear from him or not. And write happy, cheerful, newsy, interesting letters. And include local newspaper items and amusing cartoons. You can catch more bears with honey than the bait you're throwing out.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the young couple who couldn't find a church and minister for their post-pregnant wedding:

You should do a service to others in such straits by informing them of Unitarian-Universalist churches and ministers. They value individuals for honesty and candor; one need not "belong" to a Unitarian-Universalist church to use the building. Witness the many Unitarian-Universalist churches that serve as forums, or centres for unusual music, art debate, or whatever in the search for truth and for meaningful living.

If the couple are straightforward, and respect the prior scheduled commitments of the organization, I am sure they will find a sanctuary in a Unitarian-Universalist church, and a friend in the minister there. P.F.

In North America a diamond ring has been the traditional engagement symbol. As far as is known the first diamond engagement ring was given by Maximilian of Austria to Mary of Burgundy on the day of their betrothal in 1477.

The 32-page illustrated booklet "The Day You Buy A Diamond" explains that diamonds are the hardest substance known to man and that this is one of the reasons they are so precious. Because of their hardness, diamonds never wear out and can be polished to a lustre unequaled by any other stone.

The booklet also discusses the art of diamond cutting. Only 20 per cent of all rough diamonds are suitable for cutting into gem diamonds. The rest are used by industry. Since about half the weight of a rough diamond is lost in the cutting process, the larger a diamond, the greater its rarity and its value per carat.

You will also learn how to care for your diamond so that it will forever retain its dazzling beauty. In addition, the booklet suggests that once a year you take your diamonds to a jeweller and ask him to check your setting for loose prongs and signs of wear.

Women's Council Leader Makes Home in Victoria

It's in the cards that Council of Women work in this province — and espcially in Victoria — will soon be rejuvenated and revitalized.

Also, that in the coming season we may well see some exciting new programs inaugurated.

The reason? Mrs. Kay Armstrong has arrived from Toronto with her husband Gordon and youngest daughter Pat, to make her home in this city.

Two sons and two daughters were left in Ontario. Anothtr daughter is in England.

Last June Kay Armstrong was elected president of National Council of Women. Two weeks later she was in Vienna as a Canadian delegate to a triennial meeting of the International Council of Women.

There she saw three resolutions of global interest, presented by Canada, passed after certain amendments were approved.

These were the banning herbicides, the urging of tighter rules to prevent air piracy and a world-wide effort to see stringent laws passed that would insist on a spouse testifying in the case of battered children.

This last, as Mrs. Armstrong points out, would make it possible to have a child removed from the parents for care, instead of sending it back to the family where inevitably further battering takes place.

On return from Austria, Kay Armstrong was immediately embroiled in planning and packing for the move west.

Talking to her the other day in a new townhouse on Harriet Road, it was easy to understand how this dynamic, well-organized woman, with her warm smile and outgoing nature, could cope with international, national and domestic affairs, at one and the same time.

Also how she could look ahead as president of National Council (even in the midst of unpacking and arranging furniture) and plan for a future that should see "a change of direction" as she aptly puts it.

"To often, over the years, we have dealt with problems after they have become problems," she said. "Today, it is our responsibility to spot the danger areas and do everything we can to prevent problems, before they arise."

"It is the responsibility of local councils across Canada to recognize that changing times bring new needs. They must learn to pinpoint these needs, then make themselves heard."

Nationally, Mrs. Armstrong believes it must be recognized that in order to represent the women of Canada intelligently and responsibly, communications must be widened" and issues in the various regions must be dealt with on the basis of citizens' rights, not just women's rights."

Here she comes out strongly in favor of opening council doors to men's organizations as well as women's.

In Ontario, both Ottawa and Peterborough Council's have already done this and she would like to see it happen in other Councils.

"Today's fast moving world demands that we get away from the tea party attitude," she says, "and one of the best ways to do this is through a partnership with men as citizens — not just as women."

This could lead to the acceptance of many more women in policy making positions "all the way down the line," she believes.

National Council lists 49 locals across Canada, as well as a number of affiliates. There are also provincial councils to co-ordinate the work in various provinces. These bring thousands of women into membership.

Asked how she became so deeply involved in the work, this dedicated woman says she was "catapulted into it", through her interest "when our children were growing up", in the consumer movement in Ontario.

"All of a sudden I found myself provincial president and a member of the national board. Then, a year after the provincial stint was concluded, I was named national president."

The Armstrongs travelled west by car with the family dogs, an afghan and a saluki.

They had been out here several times while Capt. Armstrong was active in the Canadian services and had learned to love the Pacific Coast.

Some years ago they made the decision that when he retired (which was recently) they would live in Victoria.

Will that make it harder to fulfill her responsibilities as a national president?

"Not at all," Kay Armstrong says. "There is no reason why a national president cannot live anywhere in Canada if communication lines are kept wide open and members of the organization accept their full obligation to society."

This, as she sees it, is mainly to re-invest in the needs through the wide field of citizenship.

KAY ARMSTRONG, with her warm smile and outgoing nature, takes on dometic, national and international affairs as president of the Canadian Council of Women.

States At War

KITTERY POINT, Maine (AP) — The Maine-New Hampshire "lobster war" isn't just a battle over those tasty crustaceans that lurk along the ocean botton.

Some fishermen think it's all politics. Others insist the controversy is over potentially lucrative offshore oil deposits.

As things stand now, the United States Supreme Court may have the final say in resolving claims by the two New England states to 2,400 contested acres of ocean between Portsmouth, N.H., and the Isles of Shoals.

If the justices agree to hear the case, it probably will be years before a decision is reached.

New Hampshire took the controversy to the Supreme Court after two of its lobstermen were arrested by Maine coastal wardens for fishing in waters claimed by that state.

ADVANCE WARM-UP READY

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP) — To a person who faces the prospect of trying to start a cantankerous cold car on winter mornings, Kim Wong has an answer.

The young oilfield electronics engineer has patented a device that can be set to start a car automatically at any time.

A motorists can set the timer to start his car a few minutes before he goes to work.

"The device is primarily designed for cold climates where people cannot plug in their cars," said its inventor.

It comes with a number of other features that seem to have solved the problems associated with other automatic starters.

The device will shut the car off automatically once it warms up and also is thermostatically controlled so that if the car overheats, it will shut down.

Mr. Wong said the device probably would cost about $50 if manufactured in Japan or Hong Kong, as he intends. About the size of a coffee cup, it can be installed by anyone using standard tools.

The device will not run the car's battery down in the event it does not start quickly.

Instead it will make up to four, seven-second attempts every minute—then will abandon the project to human hands.

"I got angry one day in Edmonton when I couldn't get my car to start and thought there must be a better way," Mr. Wong said.

"I perfected the equipment by 1968 but it wasn't until now that the Canadian patent was approved."

United States, British and Japanese patents should follow shortly, he says.

Chaplain With Cap In Hand

TORONTO (CP) — There were several factors that caused Rev. Robert Gardner to give up a quiet, secure job as chaplain at Michigan State University and, nearing 50, bring his family to Canada in 1969 to accept a new, controversial appointment to work with United States draft-age immigrants.

There was the urge to accept a new challenge.

"Campus denominational work was dying, if not dead, and I wanted to move into something more meaningful," he said.

There also was the plight of many young Americans in Canada.

"Some of these kids needed food and a bed to sleep in," he said. "Some needed advice on how to become landed immigrants, while others required counselling during the lonely separation from their families."

Above all, there was his own hatred of the war and his longstanding hostility to the draft.

So when Mr. Gardner was appointed to the position by the Canadian Council of Churches, having previously offered his services, the family packed up and came to Toronto.

Mr. Gardner became more of a fund-raiser than a chaplain.

"The guys were a little tongue-in-cheek when they referred to me as chaplain," he explained. "I was never really a chaplain to them. I concentrated more on public relations and fund-raising."

They raised about $250,000 and established aid centres across the country which provided recovery programs, assistance with employment and general counselling.

He estimated that there were about 50,000 deserters and draft evaders in Canada. He also said that 90 per cent of the draft evaders and 60 per cent of the deserters want to stay in Canada.

Why the difference?

"The draft evaders tend to be educated, middle-class and skilled," he said. "Many of the deserters on the other hand were working class, less educated and less skilled and came to Canada impulsively. Naturally they have had greater difficulty in adjusting."

Now, with American involvement in the Vietnam war winding down, Mr. Gardner has taken a full time job as national co-ordinator of the Inter-Church Committee for World Development Education.

BCR Eyes Coastal Service

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway has invited proposals from private enterprise for the establishment of a joint venture company to handle tug and barge work on the Pacific West Coast.

It is another step by the provincially-owned railway to provide a complete transportation service for its customers, said Joseph Broadbent, BCR's vice-president of research and development.

Broadbent said that in addition to giving customers more complete service, the BCR hoped establishment of its own barge service would allow it to avoid bottlenecks associated with exchanging cars with other railways.

Companies wanting to make proposals must submit them to Broadbent before Sept. 15.

Those inquiring are provided by the railway with a two-page general outline which contains a subheading "tug and barge subsidiary."

The guide concludes with this warning: "Communication with any officer or agent of the railway for the purpose of interpretation or modification of this general outline is prohibited.

Any proposal must include a statement saying that the bid is based solely on information from the outline.

Under "nature of business," the railway gives wide-sweeping scope:

—"Primary consideration should be given to handling BCR waterborne traffic; that is, rail-car barge operation. Recommendations on self-propelled versus towed barges should be included.

—"Consideration should be given to the handling of forest products particularly pulp, paper and woodchips. Log towing and sorting will not be a service provided by the proposed company.

—"Capability to handle general and bulk cargoes should be included in the proposal.

—"Connections with northwester U.S. ports will be within the sphere of operations of the proposed company.

—"The provision and operation of the barge slips and berths should also receive attention.

—"Locations to be served include: near future—Vancouver, Squamish, Roberts Bank, other lower mainland locations, Vancouver Island; B.C. coast, Washington, Oregon, Alaska."

The guide said that initial effort will be directed at handling rail car traffic for the BCR.

Leased-Land Deal for Chetwynd

More provincial government land is to be released for a land-lease scheme in the B.C. interior, minister responsible for housing Lorne Nicolson announced Tuesday.

The latest available land is in Chetwynd, where 42 lots of crown land will be serviced and leased by the provincial government.

The lots will be leased through the local municipality for a period of 60 years. A deposit of $200 will be required from the lessee to make sure that a house is at least substantially constructed on the site within a year of the lease being signed.

No interest on the lease will be required for the first year.

Nicolson announced earlier this week that up to 350 lots will be made available in Williams Lake for a landlease program. Further announcements of more available land are expected in the near future.

Beauty Ill

SMOKE SPEWED FROM DETROIT

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Edison Co. employees say one of the utility's power plants was responsible for the oily soot that fell on both sides of the Detroit River for two nights.

One Edison worker, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday that black smoke "so thick you could walk across it" began spewing from a smokestack at Edison's River Rouge plant Sunday night.

A worker on the Sunday midnight shift said Edison smokestacks were "blowing out smoke all night" and the situation was not corrected until an inspector closed a faulty damper at 8 a.m. Monday.

Falling soot blanketed a 10-mile band cutting across Detroit, several suburbs and Windsor, Ont., across the Detroit River.

Authorities were inundated with complaints about blackened cars, boats, homes and clothes.

A spokesman for the air pollution control division of the Wayne County health department said Tuesday that a civil suit will be filed under Michigan's Environmental Protection Act of 1970.

Under the statute, the air pollution division can seek only to have Detroit Edison ordered to present a program to rectify, and avoid recurrences of, the problem. No monetary or punitive judgments can be sought.

Detroit Edison officials declined to comment on the planned suit.

The health department spokesman said the fallout came during a fuel changeover at the Edison plant.

He said the utility was switching to a less-polluting fuel in co-operation with the county program to comply with federal air-quality standards.

Fishing College Lacks Students

By JAMES H. HUSSEY
CP Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland, the province surrounded by water, is suffering from, of all things, a shortage of seafaring talent.

The College of Fisheries here has students from many parts of the world taking advantage of the institution's training classes for officers and engineers, but the number of Newfoundlanders interested in these careers is disappointing.

A spokesman for the college said, "it is impossible to find sufficient local students to train for fishing ships' personnel."

Down through the centuries, Newfoundlanders have been a seafaring race. Young men went to sea to get on-the-job training and studied navigation and engineering in their spare time so they could qualify for promotions.

The lack of interest in seafaring is especially disappointing at this particular time.

NEED MORE MEN

The province is ill-equipped to take full advantage of the fish quotas allotted to Canada in the Northwest Atlantic, but its modern dragger fleet and other up-to-date fishing boats are constantly being added to and more and more captains, mates, engineers and other skilled personnel are being sought.

The department of education has come up with what it hopes to be an enticing film for showing in the province's day schools. The 15-minute movie says dragger captains make up to $40,000 annually, and shows good accommodation, food and other living and working conditions on board a modern fishing craft.

The fisheries college itself will be inaugurating a basic training skill development program this fall for high school upgrading. The program, designed to encourage individual progress at the student's own rate, will be for upgrading in mathematics, English and science in Grades 5 to 11.

Nine new instructors have been hired by the college to help with the program, which will have a constant intake and outflow of students.

A college spokesman said, "the program allowing students to progress at their own rates has been used at the institution before for those doing captains' and mates' courses, but the idea of using such a program for high school upgrading is a new one."

Apart from the fact that not enough Newfoundlanders are taking advantage of the college's skill training programs, the institution is making excellent progress and six portable classrooms are being set up on the college grounds. The additional classrooms will mean accommodation for about 300 extra students this fall.

While about 300 students will begin classes in the portable classrooms, as many as 900 will be accommodated during the year because of the constant moving of the students at their own speed. As vacancies are created by students moving out they will be filled by new students.

The portable classrooms will increase the college's accommodation from around 1,000 at any one time, including field classes, to about 1,300.

Last year, the college had an enrolment of approximately 3,500, with about 2,500 attending classes at the college and another 1,000 attending field classes. Students from as far away as Singapore and Africa come to the college for training.

Just a Boy... And His Gull

PEGGY'S COVE, N.S. (CP) — Joey McGrath and Sam haven't always been best friends, and it isn't likely they will be for long. But then Sam is a gull and they can be pretty choosy.

Actually it took 15-year-old Joey a week to gain enough of the gull's confidence to convince him to eat, even though the boy had rescued the bird from almost certain death.

Joey was on a solo fishing excursion at Gull Rocks Island about three miles off the coast near here when he captured Sam, at the time only a few weeks old, abandoned and at the mercy of the other, larger gulls.

That was in mid-July and since then the two have become almost inseperable. In fact, the bird follows Joey around like a little brother.

But Joey doesn't pretent that the relationship will last forever. Sam is growing up and soon should learn to fly and perhaps leave his adopted nest forever.

On the other hand he may not. The two often return to the island on fishing trips where Sam has become something of the cock of the walk.

Joey, like the island's gulls, does the fishing. Sam just supplies the appetite.

Crime Boss Wanes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States parole board released a man said to have been a Chicago crime boss from a 15-year prison term Tuesday after being told that he is dying. Salvatore Battaglia, 64, was convicted in 1967 of conspiracy to obstruct and delay interstate commerce and conspiring to extort $70,000 from a building-materials company.

Marines Pull Out Thursday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will start moving virtually all the marines it has in Thailand to Japan starting Thursday.

The defence department said Tuesday the 2,100 marines involved in the move are members of Marine Air Group 15. When they are redeployed, only about 100 marines will remain in Thailand.

The pullout is being made under an agreement reached Friday between the United States and Thailand. Involved are about 3,550 U.S. military personnel and more than 100 aircraft that had been involved in the war in Southeast Asia. The marine air group has 36 planes.

Currently there are about 720 U.S. warplanes and 43,000 servicemen stationed in Thailand.

The initial cuts will not include any of the 50 B-52 bombers stationed in Thailand, defence department officials said.

HIGHWAY WORKERS HEN-PECKED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State highway workers are feeling hen-pecked these days by about 1,000 chickens who refuse to leave their home — the shrubbery alongside the busy Hollywood Freeway.

The chickens have been there for about a year after they escaped from a truck involved in a traffic accident.

Highway officials decided two weeks ago that the chickens were a hazard to traffic and should be removed.

Since then, crews have been trying to lure the chickens into traps with food as bait. But the squatters aren't biting. They are stuffed by food left each night by local residents.

After two weeks, harried workers report only one chicken captured.

Televiewers Warned

By DAVE THOMAS

LONDON (CP) — British viewers have been warned by the BBC that creation of a second commercial television network could cut program quality down to the American level. Justifiably proud that theirs is, in the words of a recent book on the subject, "the least worst television in the world," British audiences are awaiting a government decision that is bound to have a major effect on their entertainment.

At issue is the allocation of a fourth channel to compete with the two publicly-owned, ad-free channels of the BBC — and the one commercial network, Independent Television ITV.

The government has invited anyone interested to submit proposals for the fourth channel and, predictably, the commercial network was quick to ask that it be transferred to their control and has solicited public support with a series of full-page newspaper ads.

A flurry of competing claims soon followed and the BBC joined the fray, not with a claim of its own but with an admonition that to give commercial broadcasters a second network would introduce to Britain an American-style competition with its attendant low quality.

At present, there is a 50-50 audience split between ITV and BBC, with the two government channels sharing their portion. The advantage of this balance, says the BBC, is that it allows the use of BBC 2 for "minority" programs or, in other words, high-quality public-affairs and creative-arts programs.

If the commercial broadcasters were to gain a second channel, the BBC would have to re-tailor its offerings to keep up in the ratings race.

And high ratings, according to the BBC, means the homogenization of programming. It adds:

"Thus the ratings race leads to the selection of like program against like program and a narrowing of choice available to the audience.

"This can be demonstrated in the television system in the United States."

Such a threat, contained in a BBC brief to the government, is a powerful one here where Americans themselves generally rave about the high technical and entertainment standards of British television and their compliments usually extend to the commercial service which is more daring in its approach to sexual and other social themes than are the networks they are used to at home.

What the BBC wants to see is a completely new, non-commercial authority to look after the fourth channel which would be reserved for educational broadcasting and, in Wales, programs in the Welsh language. This would expand the services available to public minorities without upsetting the competitive balance between the BBC and ITV.

The debate about commercial television and its effects is only part of the whole television issue.

Welsh nationalists have demanded a full-time television service in Welsh and a government commission on regional broadcasting needs throughout Britain now is at work.

Proposals for the fourth channel will likely be viewed in the light of the commission's recommendations.

In any event, the debate is likely to be a long one and the government has stated that its decision may well be not to allocate the channel at all, at least not before 1981 when the present BBC and ITV franchises expire.

MATADOR ON THE FLOOR . . .

. . . at least, that's where this brave bullfighter in Tiajuana is headed following a toss in the ring.

The fighter, however escaped serious injury — and, miraculously — was not even gored.

Though shaken, he got back on his feet and finaally, at the moment of truth, killed the bull.

CHILDREN IN PRINT

HALIFAX (CP) — Children in Nova Scotia who have a flair for creative writing are getting their works into print at an early age.

A creative writing project sponsored by the Nova Scotia Youth Agency already has published three books of stories, poems and songs by Nova Scotia children, and has been collecting material this summer for another.

The project is being handled by Rick Rofihe, whose An-Der-Bo Books published the previous three volumes.

"I knew by talking to children that they had things to say and could put them in writing," Mr. Rofihe said. "I started on my own to collect some samples and publish them."

The first collection was Gushy and Gooey and Other Stuff by the Kids of Nova Scotia. This was soon followed by Stephanie Stealer and More Stuff by the Kids of Nova Scotia. Both are on sale in bookstores in the province.

The most recent book, Well, Can We Be Friends?, was sponsored by the provincial government's youth agency and has been distributed free.

The first 1,000 copies of the forthcoming book also will be distributed free in the schools. Any additional copies will be sold by An-Der-Bo Books.

"So far there's been no trouble getting enough material," Mr. Rofihe said. "Kids love to write or draw pictures about what they see or feel or think about.

Chamberlain, Windsor Betrayed U.K. London Biographer Says

LONDON (UPI) — British historian George Bilainkin said Tuesday the late Duke of Windsor — the former King Edward VIII of England — was "more responsible than any other person" for the outbreak of the Second World War, the 1940 fall of France and the destruction of the British Empire.

He said he first made the charge in a book entitled Why France Fell — Four Guilty Britons he wrote five years ago but whose publication was suppressed.

"The Duke," he said, "was more responsible than any other person for these events. My book would have given documentary proof from archives in chanceries around Western Europe and from conversations with kings, presidents, prime ministers and ambassadors that Edward VIII betrayed the British cabinet and was involved in secret plots to link the British people with the Nazi regime in Germany."

Bilainkin said the late Stanley Baldwin, British prime Minister when the Duke of Windsor was king, became so suspicious of the King's "Pro-German" activities that at the end of his short reign Baldwin forbade him to see top-secret papers which normally would have been submitted to him.

He said the archive material he had discovered also showed that the King's friend Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, whom he later married after abdicating the throne, and her associates were under "day and night observation" by the British secret service.

Bilainkin charged that the three other "guilty men" were the late Neville Chamberlain, Britain's prime minister at the outbreak of the Second World War, the late Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary at the time, and Lord Butler, a former conservative government minister who was under-secretary at the foreign office in 1939-41.

Bilainkin said his book was "commissioned, paid for and widely advertised."

"Then the publishing company which commissioned it was taken over by another company and the managing director stopped publication of the book on the ground it was libelous," he said.

"My story," he said, "was that France was betrayed and was the victim of grave misbehavior by her allies in this country then in power."

"This is perhaps the most sordid story ever told," Bilainkin said, "showing how 40 million people died needlessly for no reason except that the newspapers of this country were unable to reveal the obscene pro-German, anti-France activities of men like the Duke of Windsor, Chamberlain, Halifax and Butler."

BALDWIN
. . . suspicious

Bilainkin blamed in part "the fear of a British watergate" for suppression of his book.

"The word 'Watergate' is applicable," he said, "because it would have been the supreme watergate of the past 40 years.

Bilainkin said his suppression was supported by a decision of the present British government in January, 1971, not to allow state papers dealing with the abdication to be released after the normal 30 years but ordered them to be kept secret for 100 years.

Bilainkin said he also has been unable to obtain publication of a life of the late Joseph P. Kennedy, father of President Kennedy, and U.S. ambassador to London at the outbreak of the Second World War.

FDR
. . . misled

He said it contained material resulting from numerous conversations with Kennedy which showed that Chamberlain and members of his government "betrayed and deliberately misled" President Franklin Roosevelt.

"These men," he said, "were resolved on assisting Hitler, Mussolini, the Polish colonels and certain Japanese personages to invade the Soviet Union and to achieve the Second World War after the assassination of Stalin and his foreign minister Yvacheslav M. Molotov."

Bilainkin, 70, is a former newspaper correspondent and editor. He is the author of a number of historical books, including a biography of Tito.

18th CENTURY WRECKS FOUND

KINGSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Oceanographers at the University of Rhode Island have recovered artifacts from the area of two sunken British revolutionary war ships in Narragansett Bay.

Dr. Foster H. Middleton, professor of ocean engineering anl chief investigater for the team attempting to recover artifacts from the wreck sites of the British warships HMS Cerebus and HMS Lark in the east passage of the bay, said that getting the necessary funds for the project is the biggest problem.

Middleton said they received a $17,000 grant from Washington, but that a total of $60,000 is needed to complete the project.

He said cannon balls, cannon and part of an oven have been recovered and after a series of electronic studies of the area an attempt will be made in the next eight months to recover more items.

Middleton said they have not recovered any material that identifies the ships, but that some of the items carry the "British broad arrow," which was a mark of armament in revolutionary war days.

John McAniff, a marine scientist and a member of the recovery team, said "with the art work on the cannon there is no question of the authenticity of the find."

The two frigates were sunk several miles apart during the battle of Rhode Island in 1778 after the French joined the colonies in their fight for independence.

"We will need more money to complete the project," Middleton said. The university has voiced its reluctance to provide the necessary funds, he said, "so we hope to get the state interested."

The two wreck sites were placed in the national register of historic places to protect the artifacts.

The scientists said ballast mounts, large sections of heavy oak planking, cannons, anchors, cannon balls, ship fittings plates, coins and remnants of furniture are probably buried in sediment at the bottom of the bay.

Hungry Parents Selling Children

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — Hungry peasants in eastern India, hit by a food shortage are trying to sell their children to people who will feed the offspring.

The Calcutta newspaper Hindusthan Standard quotes the case of a man from Bihar state who last week tried to sell his two-year-old daughter in the small town of Chaibasa, 170 miles east of here.

The man was quoted as saying his wife had left him because he could not feed her, and he wanted to sell his daughter to someone able to provide for her.

He was taken to the local magistrate who ordered that he be issued with a week's supply of free rations, the newspaper reported.

A Bengali-language newspaper reported a similar case in Bilasipara, a small town in Assam, where a man tried to sell his son.

Hundreds of hungry people are pouring into Calcutta each day from rural areas of Bihar and West Bengal.

There is a food shortage in the countryside following the failure of last winter's rice crop because of drought.

'Don't Hurt Them!'

Girls Plead for Gunmen's Lives

STOCKHOLM (AP) — "Don't hurt them — they didn't harm us," two women hostages cried Tuesday night as police seized the pair of gunmen who had held four persons for 132 hours in a Stockholm bank.

"We never felt the boys were a threat to our lives," 21-year-old Kristin Enmark told a reporter. "We were scared that the police would do something that would force them to turn desperate."

The two convicts — safecracker Jan-Erik Olsson, 32, and life-term murderer Clark Olofsson, 26—surrendered after police pumped tear gas into the bank vault in which they were holding three women and a man prisoner.

There was no bloodshed, and doctors at the hospital to which the hostages were taken said their condition was "good under the circumstances."

Miss Enmark denied reports that one of the other two women had been raped repeatedly.

"None of them did anything to us," she told reporters who interviewed her in Sabbatsberg Hospital.

Olsson seized the four bank employees last Thursday when police surprised him as he was robbing the main office of the Kreditbanken.

An escaped convict, he demanded that Olofsson be brought to the bank and that they be given $650,000 in ransom and safe conduct out of the country. The government agreed but would not let them go when Olsson insisted on taking two of the hostages with him for insurance.

The convicts had the run of the bank for two days, but police trapped them and their captives Saturday in the 40-by-19-foot vault.

Early Tuesday evening, the police suddenly cut off the lights in the vault and pumped tear gas through holes they had drilled. Olsson fired a burst from his submachine-gun and then gave up.

"Shortly after the gas was pumped into the vault, I heard cries from the girls and the door was opened," Det.-Insp. Karl Gunnar Aastroem said. He said Olofsson shouted, "We surrender."

"He seemed to be fit," Aastroem continued. "I put the handcuffs around his wrists and took him away.

"Olsson did not put up any resistance either. Both appeared to be suffering from the gas."

There were two casualties in the six-day siege, a policeman shot in the hand during Olsson's robbery attempt Thursday and another policeman hit in the hand and the jaw when Olsson fired through one of the holes in the ceiling of the vault Tuesday.

U.S. Bans 9 More Adhesives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States consumer product safety commission, prompted by concern over possible genetic damage and birth defects, banned nine more aerosol spray adhesives Tuesday.

The action brought to 13 the number of brands banned since last week. All are manufactured by 3-M Co. and Borden Co.

Of the latest brand names banned, eight are made by 3-M. They are Sears Multi-Purpose Spray Adhesive, Scotch Brand Multi-Purpose Spray Adhesive, Scotch-Grip Brand Floral Adhesive 77, 3-M Brand Shipping Mate Palletizing Adhesive, 3-M Brand Spray Trim Adhesive, Tuff-Bond Spray-Hesive, Bear Brand Spray Trim Adhesive and Tri Chem Spray Mist Adhesive.

The other product banned Tuesday was Marshall's Photo-Mount Spray Adhesive, made by Borden.

The commission launched its campaign against the spray adhesives after they were linked to multiple birth defects in two Oklahoma City infants. Chromosome damage was subsequently detected in the infants' parents and four other adults.

The commission Monday released the recommendation of a scientific committee urging chromosome examinations for expectant parents who have used the sprays. The panel also recommended that parents who have been exposed to the sprays and are considering children delay their plans and get a chromosome analysis.

Banned last week were Borden's Krylson Spray Adhesive and 3-M's Adhesive 77, Foil Art Spray Adhesive and Scotch Brand Spra-Ment.

Sugar Men Back

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Sugar mill workers have agreed to end a three-week strike which has paralysed Fiji's sugar industry and caused losses of several hundred thousand dollars.

Appliance Men Pledge A Hearing

Owners of major appliances have been promised by 21 manufacturers they'll listen to complaints.

The manufacturers have set up a consumer complaint service, called RSVP, to give prompt action to complaints about appliances local dealers haven't dealt with adequately.

"I think it's an excellent step in that industry is saying they're prepared to police their own affairs," Victoria Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall said today.

Fear of government legislation forcing such action by industry is probably a partial motivation for the new service, Tindall said.

The New Tourists Flood In

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — A year ago, Britain's favorite tourist joke dealt with a North American who arrived at historic Runnymede while a guide was explaining the signing of the Magna Carta.

"When did that happen?" asked the puzzled tourist. "1215 sir," replied the tour operator. "Damn," muttered the visitor, with a disappointed glance at his watch, "missed it by 10 minutes."

This year, the jokes and snide comments about foreigners are as popular as ever when Britons find refuge in a quiet pub away from the hordes of tourists.

But now the protagonist tends to be the Italian who asked the way to the Champs Elysee or the German who wondered if chopsticks were needed to eat kidney pie.

The shift in emphasis is no indication that North Americans have suddenly found greater favor with the British but simply that the flood of tourists from Canada and the United States is ebbing while the stream of visitors from Europe swells.

PATTERN CHANGES

The changing pattern of tourist movements, officials say, is a result primarily of major changes in international currency values and varying patterns of price increases around the world.

In short, because of the weakness of the dollar, many North Americans who would ordinarily spend their holidays in Europe seem to have decided to stay at home.

Only four years ago, for example, a dollar bought four marks in West Germany. Today, after the upward revaluation of the German currency and two devaluations of the dollar, the exchange rate is about 2.60 marks to the dollar.

Prices in West Germany, France, Holland and the Scandinavian countries have also increased faster than those in either Canada or the U.S.

While the dollar-sterling rate is, in fact, better than it has often been in the past for North Americans, tourist officers here say U.S. and Canadian travellers are hesitant to spend a holiday in Britain when it cannot be combined with visits to the European countries as well.

In addition, the instability caused by the present international system of floating exchange rates leaves dollar-holders, in particular, uncertain about whether their currency will be worth as much when they arrive at their destinations as when they left home.

Some commentators place great emphasis on the fact that the level of North American tourists in Europe now is no lower than it was last year.

But tourism officials say this line of reasoning is misleading since in the past, the volume was increasing by at least 10 per cent a year.

Canadian high commission sources say the numbers of Canadian travellers registering with them this summer is down significantly from last year which, in turn, showed a decrease from the previous summer.

In June, 1972, for example, 13,666 Canadians entered Canada House compared with 12,077 for the same month this year. The June, 1972, figure was about 1,000 less than in the same month a year earlier.

Meanwhile, British tourist officials say the numbers of visitors from western Europe to the United Kingdom this year may show as much as a 50-per-cent increase over last year, again because of the pound's weakness.

In some ways these developments are welcomed by the British. West Europeans tend to adapt far more quickly to living conditions here than do North Americans.

The Europeans are also more eager to get away from the main urban centres and into the less-congested rural areas. This poses some problems, however, since many stay-at-home Britons now are finding their favorite holiday spots crowded with foreigners.

"But it's a complete transformation in some ways," said one travel authority; "we now find that Europeans are the big spenders while North Americans, because their dollars are worth so much less, have become penny-pinchers."

BOMBING FOR JESUS

ROME (AP) — Members of a self-styled "Catholic moralist" organization hurled three home-made bombs at the residence of the Danish ambassador in Rome Tuesday to protest plans for an erotic film on Jesus. Damage was slight.

Leaflets spread around the scene read:

"From the Catholics against the Danish government which has financed the blasphemous film Denmark — the pigsty of Europe."

It referred to the movie The Love Affairs of Jesus Christ which Danish producer-director Jens Joergen plans to shoot in southern France soon.

Pope Paul attacked the film as an "ignoble and blasphemous outrage" in a speech Sunday and deplored the Danish government's decision to subsidize it.

Sea Lawyers Appointed By Reserve

CPO C. R. Stevens of HMCS Donnaconna in Montreal and CPO H. J. MacLean of HMCS Unicorn in Saskatoon have been appointed advocates for men and women of the naval reserve, taking up their positions on Sunday.

The two men will be responsible for keeping the Maritime Commander aware of the reaction of naval reserve members to conditions of service.

Stevens will be the reserve's senior non-commissioned officer and be responsible for the 10 eastern reserve units. MacLean will be the representative for the six units in the west.

There are 1,000 men and women in Canada's 16 reserve units.

Skydiver Collision Kills One

TAFT, Calif. (AP) — A 20-year-old skydiver from Los Angeles fell 6,000 feet to his death after a collision broke up a group of skydivers trying to form a star, sheriff's deputies said.

Authorities said they are attempting to determine whether Terry Roberts Johnson lost consciousness after another diver crashed into him.

Officials said Johnson and Larry Lund of Burbank had just hooked up in formation when Gregory Roberts, 26, of Van Nuys, collided with them.

They said Johnson never opened his parachute although investigators at the scene said his gear was in working order.

Soapbox Derby Winner Was Told to Cheat

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The legal guardian of the 1973 national soapbox derby winner admitted Tuesday that he told his nephew to install a magnetic device in his racer that led to the boy's disqualification for cheating.

"I determined that he should build and install a magnetic nose so as to be competitive with the professional cars he would be racing against," said Robert Lange.

"I knew this was a violation of the official derby rules and I consider it now to be a serious mistake in judgement," he said.

Lange's nephew, James Gronen, 14, was disqualified as winner of a $7,500 scholarship for winning the derby when race officials found the electromagnet in the nose of his racer.

The magnet powered the car away from the derby's metal starting gate.

Lange, president of the Lange Ski Boot Co., of Broomfield, Colo., said he wanted Gronen "to be competitive. Rule violations are common. The most frequent violated rule is tampering with or altering the axles and wheels which the derby supplies to each entrant."

Lange said the derby had become tainted with rule violations by entrants and that they were not discovered "because of poor inspection and lack of supervision."

Lange also denied that his, son Robert, tampered with the racer he used to win the 1972 Soapbox Derby at Akron, Ohio. He said his son's car was "clean."

Grass By The Ton...

By PAT LEISNER

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Nearly $30 million worth of marijuana—enough for 40 million cigarettes—has been seized along Florida's west coast this year in aborted smuggling operations that federal drug fighters say arise from the soaring demand for pot.

"Demand is there and the supply is trying to catch up," said Stan Schachter, assistant regional administrator for the new United States drug enforcement administration in Miami.

"Four or five years ago we'd find shipments of 50 to 100 pounds, sometimes 500, but now it's coming in by the boatload in tons," he said.

Most of the marijuana is coming into the southeastern U.S. from Jamaica and Colombia. High quality grass from South America sells for $200 a pound and brings a dealer four times that much.

"They can make 1,000 cigarettes from a pound and sell them at 75 cents apiece," Schachter said.

Officials say the coastal pipelines are not confined to the Gulf of Mexico but extend along the eastern seaboard up into Georgia and the Carolinas as well.

Last January U.S. customs agents seized two tons of marijuana in separate hauls in central Florida. One ton, sealed in 72 watertight oilskin bags, was dangling out the porthole of a banana boat which makes regular runs between Tampa and Colombia.

HIDE IN AIRPORT

Another batch worth $1 million was tighly packed in 25 cigarette cartons stacked in a remote corner of the tiny airport at Leesburg. Agents staked out the spot and arrested six men as they pulled up in cars before dawn to load the contraband.

In March, agents confiscated nine tons from a grounded barge near Cross City in what is described as the single largest marijuana haul in American history.

Marijuana grows by the acre in mountainous areas in Jamaica and Colombia, making it difficult for local agencies to police.

"The supply is unlimited," said John Mosley, director of the Miami federal narcotics enforcement agency. "And over the past five years smugglers have learned how to transport it."

Miami used to be the big drop point, with much of the illegal drug cargo coming in by plane. Now more and more is coming into remote areas by boat.

"Any plate can be removed from a ship and the stuff hidden—in the engine room, in oil barrels, in drums as cargo," Schachter said. "You could look for six months and not find a pound of it."

Mosley said the toughest problem in controlling smuggling "is getting enough intelligence from the people who know what is going on."

Narcotics agents say Florida's 1,000 miles of coastline is physically impossible to police.

Soccer Panic Kills Fans

TERESINA, Brazil (UPI) — Four soccer fans were killed and more than a thousand injured when panic broke out at a packed stadium in Teresina, in north-eastern Brazil, after a false report that the stands were collapsing.

One hundred persons remained in critical condition in hospitals.

There were 35,000 fans in the new Alberto Silva stadium of Teresina to watch a match between Fluminense of Rio de Janeiro and a local team, Tiradentes, for the national soccer championship which started last week. It was the official opening of the stadium, named after the governor of Piaui state.

Some 16 minutes after the game began, an unidentified man shouted that the stands were collapsing. The crowd panicked and surged forward in an effort to escape.

Security barriers in one of the bleachers broke under the crowd's pressure and hundreds fell 12 feet to the ground, many on top of each other.

Squash, Beans, Tomatoes Still Require Watering

At a time when we lessen the amount of water given to roots of our garden shrubs and trees we have to remember that many of the vegetables are relying on us for their supply.

Even though a shower or two may be registered in the few hours before you read this, you still need to check the soil below the surface where your squash, beans, tomatoes and the July sowings are growing.

Only root crops which are maturing in the soil may not need extra watering. I use "may" not, because it will depend on how far advanced they are, and on how much humus material you add to your soil each spring. If you have plenty of humus in the soil, you need to soak the soil only once in three weeks for deep rooted crops like potatoes, carrots, and the cabbage family.

★ ★ ★

Even though the edible tubers and roots are in the top few inches, their feeding hair roots are below where the moisture should be.

If potatoes have pretty well reached maturity and are spending the last week or two in final sizing up in the ground, don't soak them. Only a late crop which is still green and growing will need a good watering.

The same applies to carrots and beets of an early sowing. They will be used in the next week or two without watering. But the July and early August sowings need every care you can offer—watering in the morning when needed, thinning to encourage size increase while weather and soil are still warm, and a watering over the foliage with weak solution of alginure, the seaweed fertilizer.

Just now the squash plants are making up for a slow start just as we knew they would.

With their enormous umbrella leaves spread to shield the growing fruits, there is little chance of either rain or water from a sprinkler reaching the roots.

It's up to us to lay an open-ended hose with gentle trickle near each plant in succession, for 15 minutes each. Then start over again for another 10 or 15 minutes each.

In a couple of days you notice the increase in usable fruit if they seemed slow before.

★ ★ ★

Tomatoes do not ripen with a good flavor until the fruit reaches the approximate normal size for the variety. Fireball, which has been producing vine ripened fruits since August first, is a good tomato at two-and-one-half inches diameter.

The plants need to take in a good deal of moisture to swell even a dozen fruits on a plant, but they need warm soil and freedom from frost to do this. Give water, if needed, in the morning at the roots not over the plants, and have ready a light rug, mat or sacking as cover if a clear cool night threatens frost at dawn.

Scarlet runner and bush beans in flower need an occasional good watering if the last crop of delicious pods are to be enjoyed.

With Labor Day coming up as a period of garden assessment we must do all we can to boost our total summer crops before summer ends on September 22, the day of the fall equinox.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal features a recurring situation, namely which way to finesse for a queen? In this deal, as in many similar ones, observation can eliminate the guesswork. The hand come up in a rubber-bridge game.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♠	Pass	6 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

South came up with an inspired conclusion when he decided that West's pre-emptive opening bid was designed to keep North-South out of their rightful heritage, a slam. So, goaded into action, South went full steam ahead to a small slam.

After cashing his king of spades, West continued with the spade ace, which South ruffed. Three rounds of trumps came next, ending up on the board. Dummy's remaining spade was then ruffed by South, East discarding a low diamond.

The ace, queen, and king of clubs were taken next, after which declarer pushed back his chair and reflected upon what he had learned to date.

Since East had failed to follow to the third spade lead, West was known to have started with seven spades originally. (Admittedly, West figured to have seven spades from the word "go," based on his vulnerable three-spade opening bid, but it's always pleasant to have facutal confirmation of a hunch.)

West had also folllowed suit to three trump leads. And he was also known to have been dealt exactly two clubs, since he had failed to follow suit to the third club lead. Thus West's hand had become an open book: his original 13 cards had consisted of seven spades, three hearts, two clubs, and one diamond.

The four of diamonds was now led, West following suit with the seven-spot. All of West's cards were now known to declarer — and the queen of diamonds was not one of them. Hence East had to be the possessor of Her Majesty. So declarer won the diamond lead with dummy's ace, after which he returned the diamond six and finessed his ten-spot successfully. His slam contract was now there for the taking.

In the early days of bridge, South's line of play ("counting out a hand") was considered to be too difficult for the average player to employ. But with the passage of time, it has become a part of the public domain; and its employment is mandatory if winning results are to be obtained.

"In the evening. I did notice the big clock, so you can figure it out if you want to know exactly," replied Alan. "The minute hand was right on a minute mark and seven minutes behind the hour hand."

Plastic That Rots Fast

CHICAGO (UPI) — Plastics are called "the immortal trash" in ecological circles because when discarded they take 10 years or more to decay.

But British scientist Gerry Griffin says he has invented a plastic which rots within one year.

Griffin told the American Chemical Society the secret to his discovery was making plastic with starches, which breed bacteria and hasten the decaying process.

Griffin also said his plastic is durable. The new plastic, he said, will not begin to decompose until it is buried.

He said the starch-plastic material, which can be produced in any variety and in any gauge, is now ready for commercial use.

Coloroll Ltd. of London, which sponsored Griffin's research at Brunel University, Uxbridge, Middlesex, England, reportedly has made several contacts in an effort to obtain licenses to produce the new plastic.

Griffin said he stumbled upon his discovery, and he said the solution was so simple it made him chuckle aloud.

"It began when we were working on several projects at our laboratory which were related," he said.

"Actually, we were looking at increasing the durability of plastics when something hit us on the head and said 'Wait a minute, they're all too durable now.' "

He said he'd noticed that polyurethane rubber could be suseptible to bacteria and attempted to combine it with starch, which breeds bacteria.

He made a one millimeter-thick sheet of the polyurethane-starch compound and buried it in his wife's garden. Within one month, the material had totally rotted away.

Judge Seeks Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate trial judge ordered President Nixon today to turn over for the judge's private inspection tapes subpoenaed by the Watergate prosecutor, but stayed the order for five days to permit appeal.

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica said Nixon must "produce forthwith for the court's examination in camera" the tape recordings of Nixon's conversations with key aides implicated in the Watergate political espionage investigation.

He ordered the five-day delay and added that he would extend the stay indefinitely if the completion of appeals requires it.

Sirica's order apparently means that he would examine the tapes himself before deciding whether they ought to be turned over to the Watergate grand jury.

". . . There is every reason to suppose an 'in camera' examination will materially aid the court in its decision," Sirica said in his acompanying 23-page opinion. "The fact that extensive accounts of the recorded conversations given under oath by participants are available will enable the court to make an intelligent and informed analysis of the evidence.

"The court is unable to design a more cautious approach consistent with the demonstrated critical need for the evidence and the serious questions raised concerning the applicability of the privilege asserted. The court has attempted to walk the middle ground between a failure to decide the question of privilege at one extreme, and a wholesale delivery of tapes to the grand jury at the other," Sirica said.

". . . If it be apparent that the tapes are irrelevant to the investigation or that for state reasons they cannot be introduced into the case, the subpoena duces tecum would be useless. But if this be not apparent, if they may be important in the investigation, if they may be safely heard by the grand jury, if only in part, would it not be a blot on the page which records the judicial proceedings of this country, if, in a case of such serious imports as this, the court did not at least call for an inspection of the evidence in chambers?" Sirica concluded.

Nixon's lawyers charged earlier in the day the Senate Watergate committee was conducting "a criminal investigation and trial" that exceeded its authority.

At San Clemente, Calif., where President Nixon is vacationing, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said he would have no immediate comment on Sirica's ruling.

Reporter Kinsella can't enter

DIARY MAKES MAYOR SIZZLE

HIGH RIVER, Alta. (CP) — A diary, dropped in the town hall two weeks ago by reporter Darlene Kinsella, so incensed Mayor Stan Gordon that he banned her from all council meetings.

The rookie reporter's diary contained her personal impressions of the mayor and council members.

"I guess it was a bit embarassing for them to be confronted with my notes," Miss Kinsella said in an interview. "But I never thought anyone else would see it."

Miss Kinsella said she was unaware her diary was missing until the mayor said the council had the alleged defamatory statements in her own handwriting.

"I denied spreading any statements of the kind he suggested and asked him to tell me where I had written them.

"The mayor was so insistent that I left, though I have since learned that they had no power to send me away like that. I don't think they have any right to hold onto the diary either and I want it back."

Her newspaper, the Fort Spitzee Signal, was born last March to protest council's asking the provincial government to close down the local office of the department of youth, culture and recreation. The Signal has retained a lawyer to retrieve the diary.

David Mercer, a founder of the newspaper which has a circulation of about 700 copies weekly, said the request to close down the youth office made the town look foolish, "but they really gooted this time."

BREAD UP 7c IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Retail prices for name-brand bread here will rise seven cents a 24-ounce loaf to 41 cents a loaf effective today, it was announced Tuesday. (See price story on Page 3).

Spokesmen for local bakeries said the increase was based on the current prices for flour, up almost 30 per cent over mid-July prices.

'INSTANT BANKRUPTCY'

Farms in Feed Crisis

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Vancouver Island's chicken farms face instant bankruptcy unless they can get deliveries of feed after current supplies run out on Saturday.

The development comes amid indications that even if Parliament orders a swift settlement to the national rail strike militants in B.C. will refuse to return to work.

The 18 major Island poultry farmers and 450,000 chickens rely upon feed supplies from Buckerfields Ltd.

In Duncan, Buckerfields manager Phil Moody said supplies of wheat were rapidly disappearing because of the train-and-rail-barge strike and feed was being rationed to customers until Friday.

After that?

"We don't know. If the trains are rolling by Saturday we are hopeful."

If the feed runs out, Island poultry farmers say they will be out of business 24 hours later.

Richard Fatt of Fatt's Poultry Farm has 60,000 broiler chickens.

"They are in huge rooms with about 15,000 chickens to a room. They are fed automatically.

"If the feed runs out, they start to panic.

"Within two or three hours some of them will start to turn cannibal. Then it spreads. With 15,000 in a room it is a horrible sight . . . horrible.

"I have seen films . . . I would never want to see it happen here."

He said he has enough feed to last until the weekend but is counting on a further order to keep his chickens fed. They consume about 60 tons of feed per week.

Peter Goddard of Claremont Poultry Ltd. has 28,000 laying hens.

He also has enough feed on hand to last until the weekend.

"Laying birds must have feed continuously," he said.

"They are geared for high production. If they go without feed or water for 24 hours they stop laying — and they won't start again for six weeks.

"There isn't much profit in this business right now with the high cost of feed. That would be the finish.

2 MEN TRAPPED ON SUNKEN SUB

Times News Services

Two crewmen are trapped today aboard a tiny Pisces submarine 1,500 feet below the surface of the Atlantic 150 miles off the coast of Eire while crash rescue preparations are being made on two continents.

The tiny craft was engaged in a pipe-laying project when the crewmen reported that they were experiencing trouble and unable to surface.

The Canadian-developed Pisces was one of three of the small vessels sold to a British firm, Vickers Oceanic.

The firm plans to fly another of the craft from northern Scotland to assist in rescue operations and the crafts' maker, International Hydrodynamics is readying a thirl submersible in Halifax to be flown to Ireland aboard a Canadian Forces Hercules.

It is believed that the two vessels will attempt to hook chains to the one in trouble and tow it to the surface.

Court Battle Looms

The controversial Kingsview Properties Ltd. housing development in North Cowichan appears to be shaping up for a second round in the courts.

"There's no question in my mind," Victoria lawyer Ian Stewart said today, "the matter will be going back to the courts."

Stewart was reacting to the announcement by Kingsview director George Treit, the company had decided to go ahead with plans for a massive housing development on Mount Tzouhalem at Maple Bay in spite of recent amendments of a land-use contract forced on them by North Cowichan council.

The amendments reduce the units from 1,350 to 1,250, exclude apartments and town houses and adds another 10 acres of parks and playground on the 505-acre site.

Stewart represents hundreds of Maple Bay residents opposing the development, on the grounds that it will destroy the rural atmosphere of the area, create traffic horrors and overtax utilities.

The residents had the original land-use contract quashed in court earlier this year.

"It's not surprising they (Kingsview) have decided to accept it," Stewart said, "the amendments are just another blank cheque for the developers.

"The council has made no effort whatsoever and have obviously not taken into accounts the wishes of the residents."

Treit said his company will be notifying the council of their decision next week.

"We're going to go ahead and agree with the amendments," he said. It's going to take very close supervision. We've had the directors together and we've decided we're going to go."

Asked if the reduction of units would pose an economic hurdle, Treit said that "time and inflation" would compensate for the reduction.

In spite of massive turnouts of opposing residents at four public meetings, North Cowichan council has stood pat on its assertion the Kingsview development is needed to provide housing for the influx of newcomers expected in the next few years.

Questioned after the meeting at which, in a surprise move the council gave first-reading on the amendments, Mayor Gerry Smith asserted council had been given legal assurance that no further public hearing would be required under the Municipal Act.

Residents at the meeting claimed that they should have the right to make their views known on the amendments.

U.S. Snags B.C. Gas Price Hike

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plan to boost the price of B.C. natural gas exports ran into some unexpected opposition from the U.S. Federal Power Commission here Tuesday.

The opposition was based on fears about the export of U.S. capital for natural gas exploration in northern B.C.

A decision on the price boost, and provision for an increase in the amount of gas exported, was deferred until autumn by Judge A. C. Lande who conducted a brief public hearing at the FPC headquarters.

In Vancouver, provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he is glad the U.S. body has delayed a decision.

He said the extra time will allow the British Columbia Energy Commission to complete its report, expected Sept. 15.

The provincial government opposes the proposed increase as not being nearly high enough.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. wants to raise the export price by 4.8 cents per 1,000 cubic feet and to increase exports to El Paso Natural Gas Corp., its U.S. distributor, by half, or 450 million cubic feet to a potential total of 1,250 million cubic feet.

Part of Westcoast's agreement with El Paso, which has already been cleared by the Canadian National Energy Board in Ottawa, would provide for establishment of an $80 million exploration fund to finance drilling for new gas wells.

This was what drew objections from lawyers appearing for the FPC at the hearing.

However, B.C. Energey Commission representatives, appearing at the hearing as non-intervening observers, said privately that there is no question of importing $80 million in U.S. funds for this purpose.

They said that the money would be borrowed by Westcoast in Canada. El Paso was agreeing only to supply the interest on this loan, they said.

The FPC also questioned El Paso and Westcoast representatives closely about the regulations in Canada regarding export and the possibility of future increases in gas prices.

★ Railmen Lobby MPs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Striking railway union leaders, mindful that many of their rank and file are militant and resentful, launched an effort Tuesday to outline to MPs their need for an "adequate settlement."

The move came as about 1,500 members of the non-operating workers association marched through downtown Toronto in a show of determisation to stay out until they get what they feel is a fair settlement.

Ross Jones, president of the 10,000-member Toronto local, suggested railway workers may call in sick if they don't like a settlement decreed by Parliament.

"We-re not going to bow down like sheep again," he said in an interview, referring to a return-to-work order by Parliament which ended the 1966 national rail strike.

Cabinet met Tuesday to work out details of the bill that is to end the national rail strike.

Rain After Quake

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Torrential rains drenched rescue workers in some parts of southeast Mexico City today as they searched for bodies or trapped survivors from the worst earthquake in modern Mexican history. (Picture on Page 3.)

The rains added to an already serious flood problem and drove more people from their homes.

The Associated Press said late figures from the quake areas 120 to 220 miles south and east of Mexico City indicated more than 500 persons died in the devastating earth shock at 3:51 a.m. Tuesday. It was the highest death toll of an earthquake in Mexico since the keeping of such records started in the early 1900s.

The quake, coming during the worst rainy season in 30 years, extended a disaster area that already covered much of central Mexico. Seventy-six persons have died in floods in the last month, the homes of more than 400,000 have been damaged and millions of dollars worth of crops have been ruined.

CanCel Showed Profit Before B.C. Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., controlled by the British Columbia government, Tuesday reported net income for the first half of this year of $5,712,000 or 47 cents a common share.

The earnings, up from a loss of $7,386,000 or 61 cents a share for the first half of 1972, were reported to shareholders by president Ronald Gross in an interim statement.

This year's first half net income, made on sales of $71,084,000, was reported as of June 29 before the write-down of assets associated with the company's reorganization. On that date Celanese Corp. of New York wrote off its position in Columbia Cellulose Co., Ltd. Canadian Cellulose was an operating subsidiary of Columbia.

From a bookkeeping view, the second half shows a loss of $67,038,000 or $5.50 per share, reflecting the $72,750,000 of asset write-downs connected with the Celanese divestiture. The large deficit figure will continue to show on the books for some time.

Net income for the second quarter was $4,663,000 on sales of $41,233,000 compared with the second quarter of 1972 when therewas a net loss of $3,176,000 on sales of $33,714,000.

Sales for the first half of 1972 were $58,892,000. Calculations of profits per share are made on 12,191,203 shares now outstanding. Of these, 79 per cent are held by B.C. Cellulose Co. Ltd. for the provincial government, 14 per cent went to former Colcel preferred shareholders and the balance to Colcel common shareholders.

Lin Piao Purged 'Forever'

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party, meeting in secret session, held its 10th national congress in Peking from Aug. 24 to 28 and adopted a new party constitution, Peking radio announced today.

Mao Tse-Tung, the party chairman for almost 40 years, presided over the session. Premier Chou En-Lai, considered the No. 2 man behind Mao, delivered the usual political report.

Peking Radio, broadcasting the official press communique, said the congress was "held solemnly" and "was a congress of unity, a congress of victory and a congress full of vigor."

The communique denounced the late Lin Piao, once the crown prince of Chinese Communism, as a traitor and purged him from the party "forever." It said that Chen Po-Ta, who once served as Mao's private secretary and confidante, also was purged "forever."

Lin, defence minister for more than a dozen years, was named as "successor" to Mao by an unprecedented article in the party constitution adopted at the 9th national congress, held in April 1969.

He died in a plane crash in Mongolia in September 1971 while trying to flee to the Soviet Union after an abortive coup d'etat attempt against Mao, according to accounts given by Chou and other Chinese leaders to visitors to China.

Chen Po-Ta was purged at the 2nd plenary session of the central committee of the 9th party congress, held in September 1970, a year before Lin fell.

One of the key purposes of the 10th congress, which came before it was scheduled, was to revise the constitution to eliminate the section which specified that Lin was Mao's "close comrade-in-arms and successor."

TIGER TALES TEMPER TAXES

You'd never imagine, would you, that your taxes as a Victoria property owner could be even remotely affected by the current status of the Indian tiger or the African lion?

Well, friends, that's where you'd be wrong. For there is some slight connection between such exotic subjects and your mundane tax bill—in the form of the McPherson Playhouse.

The city-owned theatre's operating deficit more than doubled last year, from $5,961 in 1971 to $11,949, and recreation manager Jack Morgan says at least part of the explanation for a $3,600 drop in total revenue was a reduction in the number of film bookings.

"Back in the mid-1960's everyone started getting into the nature films thing—big game hunting, ecology, you name it," said Morgan.

"Now these people sell their films directly to the television stations so there's no need for them to go on the road."

To back up his point, Morgan said audiences which had built up to a peak of 37,000 for such movies in 1969, fell steadily to 34,000 in 1970, 21,000 in 1971 and a paltry 13,600 last year.

"The only ones we had last year were the World Adventure Tours. We've completely lost the nature films people, who would pay full rental rates for professional use and play to two shows," he added.

Morgan pointed out that because there is a substantial difference between rentals for amateur and professional use, the theatre could appear to be used more intensively yet produce less revenue if amateur functions predominate.

Revenue from building rentals fell from $57,105 in 1971 to $53,573 in 1972.

On the brighter side, Morgan said the city's two major recreational facilities, the Memorial Arena and the new Crystal Pool, reflected a "fairly healthy subsidization picture" last year.

The Memorial Arena had total operating expenses of $281,025 and revenue came to $257,099 for a deficit of $23,926 (up from $16,048 in 1971). Concession sales earned a $28,282 profit.

The new Crystal, opened Nov. 27, 1971, showed in its first full operating year last year that a modern, large facility could be run for only marginally more money than its Victorian predecessor.

Although operating expenditure went up from $178,795 in 1971 to a hefty $223,643, there was a corresponding jump in revenue from $92,505 to $135,034. Thus the $88,609 deficit last year was only $2,319 more than the previous year's figure.

The new pool attracted many more customers for public swimming, more than doubling 1971 revenue of $22,060 for a total of $54,257.

$15,000-Plus Deficit Predicted for Royal

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

An operatilng deficit of between $10,650 and $15,650 is projected for the Royal Theatre if the building is purchased and operated by the four core municipalities as a cultural centre.

A feasibility report on the acquisition of the theatre, prepared by Victoria city staff and now being circulated to Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, states the higher figure would apply if a $5,000 capital item is included in the operatilng budget for repairs and new equipment.

The 60-year-old building on Broughton has been offered by Famous Players Ltd. to the municipalities for $250,000.

Backers of the proposal, led by Mayor Peter Pollen, favor the Royal as a temporary home for the Victoria Symphony.

The report says a study of sales in the surrounding area indicates land values at $12 to $14 per square foot, therefore the 18,000-square-foot site alone — without the building would be worth between $216,000 and $252,000.

It says the building is still in sound structural condition, adding: "There is no reason why it should not continue to remain sound for a further 60 years, given continued maintenance."

But the building has "some relatively minor discrepancies" with regard to the latest National Building Code requirements, including the need to install sprinklers in workshops, dressing rooms and storage areas; vents above stage for removing smoke in case of a fire; and heat sensors to activate the asbestos curtain.

★

The 1913-vintage plumbing is described as "reasonably adequate," but the report says three major items will require "repair and-or replacement" if the theatre's present use is changed:

—Wiring for footlights, curtain lights and associated dimmer controls.

—Stage ropes and draperies.

—The public address system.

No estimate is given in the report for the cost of replacing or repairing these items, but Mayor Pollen said last week it would cost $20,000 to $30,000 to refurbish the theatre to a reasonable standard.

Allan Purdy, chairman of the Pacific Coast Centre Foundation (a group which wants a centre built in Victoria, and is opposed to the Royal proposal) said today those three items alone would cost far more than the mayor's estimate.

Purdy said a sophisticated fly-rope mechanism alone could cost between $5,000 and $10,000, while spotlights and floodlights could account for a further $15,000—exclusive of wiring costs.

Earlier, the PPCF estimated that refurbishing the theatre to acceptable standards could cost taxpayers as much as $200,000.

As for the plumbing, Purdy laughed at the report's view that it is "reasonably adequate." It all depended what was meant by adequate, he said, adding that when some 150 performers from the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and the Victoria Symphony were there on one occasion "two toilets were available."

The feasibility study estimates total revenue at $44,100, but says this figure does not include possible revenues from films. Negotiations with Famous Players for renting the building to the firm for film shows are now in progress.

Operating expenses are estimated at $54,750.

Steady but swift lads, briefs Capt. Ron Otteson, right, of Edmonton

Chopper Bellies Spawn Raw 'Green Berets' in Soggy Turf

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The blades of the three armed forces "choppers" whirled.

Teenagers sprang from the machines' bellies, flinging themselves prostrate on the sodden ground.

It was prelude to the most imaginative program ever carried out at a military college.

This was Tuesday when Royal Roads Military College's rawest recruits — they signed in Aug. 11 — received basic preparation for New League 1, the exercise which began this morning and ends Friday.

For most of the recruits, dressed in green fatigues, berets covering their college-cropped hair, it was their first eyeball-to-eyeball encounter with the military machine.

Before them at the ready, were three CH 135 combat helicopters from 408 squadron, flown from Edmonton for the exercise.

The 160 fledgling servicemen and their instructors listened intently as mission commander Capt. Ron Otteson briefed them on the proper ways in which to enter and leave the "choppers" at the fastest speed possible and with the greatest safety.

New League 1 is the brainchild of Royal Roads instructor Major Victor Coroy, an artillery man and pilot of both fixed-wing planes and helicopters.

Also on hand for the military initiation was Lt.-Col. R. W. Fentiman, commander of the Edmonton squadron.

He explained that the "choppers" were the same type as used in Vietnam — built in Texas and installed with twin engines manufactured in Montreal.

He gave a businesslike nod of approval as the recruits snapped to with a will — going through the evolutions like pros after a few dummy runs.

Coroy explained, "The exciting part of this exercise is that all three elements (land, sea and air) will be taking part.

"The name of the game is that the recruits will be, for the purpose of New League 1, a military force called in by civilian authorities, to help restore order during uprisings by dissidents."

With a grin, he added that a Royal Roads officer, taking the role of the civilian "governor," sported an award worn by his dog in a show, as his makeshift badge of office!

At first light today New League 1 began.

Aboard landing craft, the recruits were taken to Albert Head.

Between now and Friday, they will make their way from Albert Head to Ranch Point near Nanoose and then, Nanaimo, being airlifted by the Edmonton craft.

In each area, they will carry out evolutions, learning the arts of map and compass reading under field conditions.

The final trek will be by "Shank's Pony" — from Nanaimo to the Esquimalt firing base — no mean feat for the uninitiated.

As Coroy says:

"It will help limber them up, get them in shape for the annual obstacle race Sept. 21!"

HERE'S A CHANCE TO GET GRADE 12

People who never finished school will get a chance to earn a high school equivalency certificate by taking five tests Sept. 21 and 22.

Tests will be held at Camosun College and other community colleges around the province, and are open to anyone over 19, out of school at least a year and a B.C. resident at least six months.

Those who pass will have the equivalent of Grade 12 graduation.

Applicants will be tested on English expression, social studies, natural sciences, literary material, and mathematical ability. Understanding and reasoning powers will be tested, not facts the student remembers.

First test begins at 6 p.m. Sept. 21, the second at 8:30 p.m., the third Sept. 22 at 10 a.m., the fourth at 1 p.m. and the fifth at 3 p.m.

The multiple choice tests take up to two hours.

Anyone who fails can repeat the tests later. Future tests will be held in December, March and June.

It's a Game of Giving —The Art of Matrimony

Marriage is the greatest educational institution on Earth —Channing Pollock.

★ ★ ★

The wedding of our youngest daughter, Jenny, to Walter Andrew Walsh, future airline pilot, went off very nicely, thank you, and if you think for a moment that I'm going to let the occasion slip by without some words on the subject of matrimony you're badly mistaken.

Marriage is a game of give and take, but it's the giving that makes it work. This is the fundamental thing about an alliance between a man and woman. Yet it is the one thing that's unknown or un-anticipated by the vast majority of couples who make that contract.

We did not know it or anticipate it when we tripped to the altar back when the world was young. I'm sure that neither Andy nor Jenny know it or anticipate it though, heaven knows, they seem much more mature than we were. (My wife still recalls her astonishment when I sloped into the church in my new Fox serge blue suit, licking a double-scoop butterscotch ice cream cone.)

★ ★ ★

Marriage is, essentially, an impossible arrangement. To work successfully, it demands a total compatibility between two persons whose whole life until then has been spent in developing their individualism. It may be the first week, the first month or the first year. Sooner or later, there will come the crunch of realization that something has to give. That is the moment of truth in matrimony. The decisions made then will determine whether it will be a hit or a miss.

The trick is not to lose or subjugate that individuality. No marriage is sicker than one in which a man or woman has wholly surrendered his or her true self in the interests of keeping the peace. The trick is to adjust to a relationship someone has described as equal independence, mutual dependence and reciprocal obligation.

The happiest marriages I know, in fact, involve couples who are totally dissimilar in personalities. Like partners in a business enterprise it is a strength, not a weakness, when each contributes a different dimension to the marriage. Surprisingly often, as in nature, opposites attract. Yet a quiet, reflective man and an effervescent, out-going woman (to cite just one example that comes to mind) may be an alliance far more durable than the marriage in which husband and wife are alike.

★ ★ ★

The one fatal move, an inherent peril in every marriage and, I would guess the most frequent cause of divorce, is for either party to try to re-make the other. Any attempt to shape the behaviour or the opinions or the character of a partner is doomed to failure in one of two ways. If it works it destroys that which was the original attraction. If it is attempted and fails it may be the cause of life-long recriminations. As it is in every kind of social encounter, "be yourself" is the only rule that works.

That is where the giving comes in. Joseph Addison, perhaps the most articulate of all advocates of marriage, may have said it best when he wrote that, having made the choice of matrimony, the couple had "bound themselves to be good-humored, affable, discreet, forgiving, patient and joyful, with respect to each other's frailties and perfections, to the end of their lives."

That that is possible without in any way sacrificing individuality is something that every happily married couple has had to learn after the honeymoon is over. Romance, alone, sexual fulfillment, alone, is not the long-term guarantee of success. That comes only with the knowledge of when to give.

Which is just another way of saying what may be said in one simple, splendid word: Understanding. And, really, that's all it takes.

Dear Deer Dash

A Langford youth who said he was chasing deer in his car on a Colwood soccer field in the middle of the night was fined $100 today for causing mischief.

William Keith Gray, 17, of 2838 Jacklin Road, was driving his car in circles around the Juan de Fuca Sports Field July 27, prosecutor Peter Birkett said in Victoria provincial court today.

Employees of the nearby Juan de Fuca Arena saw the car, locked the gates to the soccer field so Gray couldn't get out and phoned police.

Gray told police at that time he and a friend were just chasing deer that sometimes wander on the field.

"Well, I guess we weren't really chasing them, we were just sort of shining the car lights on them," Gray told Judge William Ostler today.

Ostler shook his head and said, "I thought nothing could surprise me anymore. This is the most destructively irresponsible act I've seen in a long time."

Gray was fined $100 and given a six-month probationary term. Within four months he was told to pay $100 to the Capital Regional District, the owner of the sports field, for damage caused by tire marks on the field. Gray's driver's licence was suspended for four months.

1,200 Want Police Vote

A petition asking for a referendum on Central Saanich police requirements has been signed by 1,200 ratepayers and the group circulating the petition is aiming for 1,350, spokesman Charles Mollard said today.

Mayor Archie Galbraith said 800 signatures would be needed to persuade council to hold a referendum. The petition will be presented council Sept. 4.

Rent Bureau Cost Wrangle Nears End

After months of wrangling Saanich took the first steps Tuesday toward paying its share of the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau's costs.

Council's lands, housing and social services committee accepted the recommendation of projects assistant Dick Gibson that Saanich pay $3,084 of the bureau's $12,854 budget.

The committee will recommend to council that payment begin Sept. 1.

Saanich's participation in the city-based bureau was triggered by amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act requiring all districts and cities to have such bureaus.

Gibson described a cost formula in which the six Capital Region municipalities would pay 60 per cent of their share based on the number of their residents using the bureau's services, and 40 per cent based on the intermunicipal per capita formula.

If accepted by the other municipalities this means that Victoria would be assessed $6,996 of the $12,854 budget; Oak Bay, $1,071; Esquimalt, $1,334; Central Saanich, $218 and North Saanich, $151.

"We shoujld receive quarterly reports (from the bureau)," chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said, "They should not just include statistics but such kind of information as the type of enquiries they receive."

Under the new provincial legislation landlords cannot demand security deposits unless there is a municipal bylaw to spell out requirements.

Ald. Frank Waring said, "The bylaw should allow a landlord to have a right to have a security deposit."

Based along the lines of the city of Victoria's bylaw, the Saanich legislation, if approved by council, will allow a landlord to require a security deposit up to the amount of one-half of a month's rent.

It will also lay down requirements for return of the deposit if there have been no claims against it.

UVic Tally: It's Up Again

A healthy increase in student enrolment is expected by University of Victoria officials this year, reversing earlier predictions that a recent downward trend would continue.

Although exact enrolment figures are not available, director of Admissions Ronald Jeffels said the picture shows a "considerable increase."

An extra 400 applications for admission "looks very buoyant," he said.

Applications show a vast interest in marine biology, indicating the growing concern about the environment, and a marked increase in faculty of education.

"In the past students have been alarmed and depressed about a lack of jobs available in the field of education, but this year it looks like it's not affecting their decision," Jeffels said.

"The university's in a good position if this year's upward trend continues," he said.

He pointed out a growth in the number of part-time students entering the university to take both credit courses and non-credit evening courses.

"We don't know how many students have applied to two universities and are picking one of the two, so we can't tell for sure. But the part-time job market was buoyant this summer, so we're optimistic that students at least have the money toattend."

UVic vice-president Dr. Stephen Jennings was also optimistic.

"Our projections over the last two or three years showed registration is levelling off or declining silghtly and the situation might be due to community colleges, although it doesn't affect us too much in Victoria.

"It appears now we may get an increase, but until we get the students' money in our hot little hands we won't know for sure."

Projections showed last year's 4,163 full-time undergraduates was expected to drop to 3,970 this year and the prediction for next year is 3,898.

Jennings said the university's decision last spring to hold off budget increases in an attempt to close a $974,000 gap between UVic's operating budget and revenues for 1973-74 will not cause problems with an increased enrolment.

"We can cope with the reasonable increase of the kind predicted. And if it continues we'd have to study the matter."

Judge Seeks Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate trial judge ordered President Nixon today to turn over for the judge's private inspection tapes subpoenaed by the Watergate prosecutor, but stayed the order for five days to permit appeal.

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica said Nixon must "produce forthwith for the court's examination in camera" the tape recordings of Nixon's conversations with key aides implicated in the Watergate political espionage investigation.

He ordered the five-day delay and added that he would extend the stay indefinitely if the completion of appeals requires it.

Sirica's order apparently means that he would examine the tapes himself before deciding whether they ought to be turned over to the Watergate grand jury.

". . . There is every reason to suppose an 'in camera' examination will materially aid the court in its decision," Sirica said in his acompanying 23-page opinion. "The fact that extensive accounts of the recorded conversations given under oath by participants are available will enable the court to make an intelligent and informed analysis of the evidence.

"The court is unable to design a more cautious approach consistent with the demonstrated critical need for the evidence and the serious questions raised concerning the applicability of the privilege asserted. The court has attempted to walk the middle ground between a failure to decide the question of privilege at one extreme, and a wholesale delivery of tapes to the grand jury at the other," Sirica said.

". . . If it be apparent that the tapes are irrelevant to the investigation or that for state reasons they cannot be introduced into the case, the subpoena duces tecum would be useless. But if this be not apparent, if they may be important in the investigation, if they may be safely heard by the grand jury, if only in part, would it not be a blot on the page which records the judicial proceedings of this country, if, in a case of such serious imports as this, the court did not at least call for an inspection of the evidence in chambers?" Sirica concluded.

Nixon's lawyers charged earlier in the day the Senate Watergate committee was conducting "a criminal investigation and trial" that exceeded its authority.

At San Clemente, Calif., where President Nixon is vacationing, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said he would have no immediate comment on Sirica's ruling.

BREAD UP 7c IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Retail prices for name-brand bread here will rise seven cents a 24-ounce loaf to 41 cents a loaf effective today, it was announced Tuesday. (See price story on Page 3).

Spokesmen for local bakeries said the increase was based on the current prices for flour, up almost 30 per cent over mid-July prices.

Reporter Kinsella can't enter

DIARY MAKES MAYOR SIZZLE

HIGH RIVER, Alta. (CP) — A diary, dropped in the town hall two weeks ago by reporter Darlene Kinsella, so incensed Mayor Stan Gordon that he banned her from all council meetings.

The rookie reporter's diary contained her personal impressions of the mayor and council members.

"I guess it was a bit embarassing for them to be confronted with my notes," Miss Kinsella said in an interview. "But I never thought anyone else would see it."

Miss Kinsella said she was unaware her diary was missing until the mayor said the council had the alleged defamatory statements in her own handwriting.

"I denied spreading any statements of the kind he suggested and asked him to tell me where I had written them.

"The mayor was so insistent that I left, though I have since learned that they had no power to send me away like that. I don't think they have any right to hold onto the diary either and I want it back."

Her newspaper, the Fort Spitzee Signal, was born last March to protest council's asking the provincial government to close down the local office of the department of youth, culture and recreation. The Signal has retained a lawyer to retrieve the diary.

David Mercer, a founder of the newspaper which has a circulation of about 700 copies weekly, said the request to close down the youth office made the town look foolish, "but they really goofed this time."

'INSTANT BANKRUPTCY'

Farms in Feed Crisis

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Vancouver Island's chicken farms face instant bankruptcy unless they can get deliveries of feed after current supplies run out on Saturday.

The development comes amid indications that even if Parliament orders a swift settlement to the national rail strike militants in B.C. will refuse to return to work.

The 18 major Island poultry farmers and 450,000 chickens rely upon feed supplies from Buckerfields Ltd.

In Duncan, Buckerfields manager Phil Moody said supplies of wheat were rapidly disappearing because of the train-and-rail-barge strike and feed was being rationed to customers until Friday.

After that?

"We don't know. If the trains are rolling by Saturday we are hopeful."

If the feed runs out, Island poultry farmers say they will be out of business 24 hours later.

Richard Fatt of Fatt's Poultry Farm has 60,000 broiler chickens.

"They are in huge rooms with about 15,000 chickens to a room. They are fed automatically.

"If the feed runs out, they start to panic.

"Within two or three hours some of them will start to turn cannibal. Then it spreads. With 15,000 in a room it is a horrible sight . . . horrible.

"I have seen films . . . I would never want to see it happen here."

He said he has enough feed to last until the weekend but is counting on a further order to keep his chickens fed. They consume about 60 tons of feed per week.

Peter Goddard of Claremont Poultry Ltd. has 28,000 laying hens.

He also has enough feed on hand to last until the weekend.

"Laying birds must have feed continuously," he said.

"They are geared for high production. If they go without feed or water for 24 hours they stop laying and they won't start again for six weeks.

"There isn't much profit in this business right now with the high cost of feed. That would be the finish.

2 MEN TRAPPED ON SUNKEN SUB

Times News Services

Two crewmen are trapped today aboard a tiny Pisces submarine 1,500 feet below the surface of the Atlantic 150 miles off the coast of Eire while crash rescue preparations are being made on two continents.

The tiny craft was engaged in a pipe-laying project when the crewmen reported that they were experiencing trouble and unable to surface.

The Canadian-developed Pisces was one of three of the small vessels sold to a British firm, Vickers Oceanic.

The firm plans to fly another of the craft from northern Scotland to assist in rescue operations and the crafts' maker, International Hydrodynamics is readying a third submersible in Halifax to be flown to Ireland aboard a Canadian Forces Hercules.

It is believed that the two vessels will attempt to hook chains to the one in trouble and tow it to the surface.

Court Battle Looms

The controversial Kingsview Properties Ltd. housing development in North Cowichan appears to be shaping up for a second round in the courts.

"There's no question in my mind," Victoria lawyer Ian Stewart said today, "the matter will be going back to the courts."

Stewart was reacting to the announcement by Kingsview director George Treit, the company had decided to go ahead with plans for a massive housing development on Mount Tzouhalem at Maple Bay in spite of recent amendments to a land-use contract forced on them by North Cowichan council.

The amendments reduce the units from 1,350 to 1,250, exclude apartments and town houses and add another 10 acres of parks and playground on the 505-acre site.

Stewart represents hundreds of Maple Bay residents opposing the development, on the grounds that it will destroy the rural atmosphere of the area, create traffic horrors and overtax utilities.

The residents had the original land-use contract quashed in court earlier this year.

"It's not surprising they (Kingsview) have decided to accept it," Stewart said, "the amendments are just another blank cheque for the developers.

"The council has made no effort whatsoever and has obviously not taken into account the wishes of the residents."

Treit said his company will be notifying the council of its decision next week.

"We're going to go ahead and agree with the amendments," he said. "It's going to take very close supervision. We've had the directors together and we've decided we're going to go."

Asked if the reduction of units would pose an economic hurdle, Treit said that "time and inflation" would compensate for the reduction.

In spite of massive turnouts of opposing residents at four public meetings, North Cowichan council has stood pat on its assertion the Kingsview development is needed to provide housing for the influx of newcomers expected in the next few years.

Questioned after the meeting at which, in a surprise move the council gave first-reading on the amendments, Mayor Gerry Smith asserted council had been given legal assurance that no further public hearing would be required under the Municipal Act.

Residents at the meeting claimed that they should have the right to make their views known on the amendments.

U.S. Snags B.C. Gas Price Hike

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plan to boost the price of B.C. natural gas exports ran into some unexpected opposition from the U.S. Federal Power Commission here Tuesday.

The opposition was based on fears about the export of U.S. capital for natural gas exploration in northern B.C.

A decision on the price boost, and provision for an increase in the amount of gas exported, was deferred until autumn by Judge A. C. Lande who conducted a brief public hearing at the FPC headquarters.

In Vancouver, provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he is glad the U.S. body has delayed a decision.

He said the extra time will allow the British Columbia Energy Commission to complete its report, expected Sept. 15.

The provincial government opposes the proposed increase as not being nearly high enough.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. wants to raise the export price by 4.8 cents per 1,000 cubic feet and to increase exports to El Paso Natural Gas Corp., its U.S. distributor, by half, or 450 million cubic feet to a potential total of 1,250 million cubic feet.

Part of Westcoast's agreement with El Paso, which has already been cleared by the Canadian National Energy Board in Ottawa, would provide for establishment of an $80 million exploration fund to finance drilling for new gas wells.

This was what drew objections from lawyers appearing for the FPC at the hearing.

However, B.C. Energey Commission representatives, appearing at the hearing as non-intervening observers, said privately that there is no question of importing $80 million in U.S. funds for this purpose.

They said that the money would be borrowed by Westcoast in Canada. El Paso was agreeing only to supply the interest on this loan, they said.

The FPC also questioned El Paso and Westcoast representatives closely about the regulations in Canada regarding export and the possibility of future increases in gas prices.

★ Railmen Lobby MPs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Striking railway union leaders, mindful that many of their rank and file are militant and resentful, launched an effort Tuesday to outline to MPs their need for an "adequate settlement."

The move came as about 1,500 members of the non-operating workers association marched through downtown Toronto in a show of determisation to stay out until they get what they feel is a fair settlement.

Ross Jones, president of the 10,000-member Toronto local, suggested railway workers may call in sick if they don't like a settlement decreed by Parliament.

"We're not going to bow down like sheep again," he said in an interview, referring to a return-to-work order by Parliament which ended the 1966 national rail strike.

Cabinet met Tuesday to work out details of the bill that is to end the national rail strike.

Rain After Quake

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Torrential rains drenched rescue workers in some parts of southeast Mexico City today as they searched for bodies or trapped survivors from the worst earthquake in modern Mexican history. (Picture on Page 3.)

The rains added to an already serious flood problem and drove more people from their homes.

The Associated Press said late figures from the quake areas 120 to 220 miles south and east of Mexico City indicated more than 500 persons died in the devastating earth shock at 3:51 a.m. Tuesday. It was the highest death toll of an earthquake in Mexico since the keeping of such records started in the early 1900s.

The quake, coming during the worst rainy season in 30 years, extended a disaster area that already covered much of central Mexico. Seventy-six persons have died in floods in the last month, the homes of more than 400,000 have been damaged and millions of dollars worth of crops have been ruined.

CanCel Showed Profit Before B.C. Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., controlled by the British Columbia government, Tuesday reported net income for the first half of this year of $5,712,000 or 47 cents a common share.

The earnings, up from a loss of $7,386,000 or 61 cents a share for the first half of 1972, were reported to shareholders by president Ronald Gross in an interim statement.

This year's first half net income, made on sales of $71,084,000, was reported as of June 29 before the write-down of assets associated with the company's reorganization. On that date Celanese Corp. of New York wrote off its position in Columbia Cellulose Co., Ltd. Canadian Cellulose was an operating subsidiary of Columbia.

From a bookkeeping view, the second half shows a loss of $67,038,000 or $5.50 per share, reflecting the $72,750,000 of asset write-downs connected with the Celanese divestiture. The large deficit figure will continue to show on the books for some time.

Net income for the second quarter was $4,663,000 on sales of $41,233,000 compared with the second quarter of 1972 when there was a net loss of $3,176,000 on sales of $33,714,000.

Sales for the first half of 1972 were $58,892,000. Calculations of profits per share are made on 12,191,203 shares now outstanding. Of these, 79 per cent are held by B.C. Cellulose Co. Ltd. for the provincial government, 14 per cent went to former Colcel preferred shareholders and the balance to Colcel common shareholders.

Lin Piao Purged 'Forever'

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party, meeting in secret session, held its 10th national congress in Peking from Aug. 24 to 28 and adopted a new party constitution, Peking radio announced today.

Mao Tse-Tung, the party chairman for almost 40 years, presided over the session. Premier Chou En-Lai, considered the No. 2 man behind Mao, delivered the usual political report.

Peking Radio, broadcasting the official press communique, said the congress was "held solemnly" and "was a congress of unity, a congress of victory and a congress full of vigor."

The communique denounced the late Lin Piao, once the crown prince of Chinese Communism, as a traitor and purged him from the party "forever." It said that Chen Po-Ta, who once served as Mao's private secretary and confidante, also was purged "forever."

Lin, defence minister for more than a dozen years, was named as "successor" to Mao by an unprecedented article in the party constitution adopted at the 9th national congress, held in April 1969.

He died in a plane crash in Mongolia in September 1971 while trying to flee to the Soviet Union after an abortive coup d'etat attempt against Mao, according to accounts given by Chou and other Chinese leaders to visitors to China.

Chen Po-Ta was purged at the 2nd plenary session of the central committee of the 9th party congress, held in September 1970, a year before Lin fell.

One of the key purposes of the 10th congress, which came before it was scheduled, was to revise the constitution to eliminate the section which specified that Lin was Mao's "close comrade-in-arms and successor."

BCR Eyes Coastal Service

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway has invited proposals from private enterprise for the establishment of a joint venture company to handle tug and barge work on the Pacific West Coast.

It is another step by the provincially-owned railway to provide a complete transportation service for its customers, said Joseph Broadbent, BCR's vice-president of research and development.

Broadbent said that in addition to giving customers more complete service, the BCR hoped establishment of its own barge service would allow it to avoid bottlenecks associated with exchanging cars with other railways.

Companies wanting to make proposals must submit them to Broadbent before Sept. 15.

Those inquiring are provided by the railway with a two-page general outline which contains a subheading "tug and barge subsidiary."

The guide concludes with this warning: "Communication with any officer or agent of the railway for the purpose of interpretation or modification of this general outline is prohibited.

Any proposal must include a statement saying that the bid is based solely on information from the outline.

Under "nature of business," the railway gives wide-sweeping scope:

—"Primary consideration should be given to handling BCR waterborne traffic; that is, rail-car barge operation. Recommendations on self-propelled versus towed barges should be included.

—"Consideration should be given to the handling of forest products particularly pulp, paper and woodchips. Log towing and sorting will not be a service provided by the proposed company.

—"Capability to handle general and bulk cargoes should be included in the proposal.

—"Connections with northwester U.S. ports will be within the sphere of operations of the proposed company.

—"The provision and operation of the barge slips and berths should also receive attention.

—"Locations to be served include: near future—Vancouver, Squamish, Roberts Bank, other lower mainland locations, Vancouver Island; B.C. coast, Washington, Oregon, Alaska."

The guide said that initial effort will be directed at handling rail car traffic for the BCR.

Leased-Land Deal for Chetwynd

More provincial government land is to be released for a land-lease scheme in the B.C. interior, minister responsible for housing Lorne Nicolson announced Tuesday.

The latest available land is in Chetwynd, where 42 lots of crown land will be serviced and leased by the provincial government.

The lots will be leased through the local municipality for a period of 60 years. A deposit of $200 will be required from the lessee to make sure that a house is at least substantially constructed on the site within a year of the lease being signed.

No interest on the lease will be required for the first year.

Nicolson announced earlier this week that up to 350 lots will be made available in Williams Lake for a landlease program. Further announcements of more available land are expected in the near future.

City Students Win Awards As Achievers

Three Victoria area students have been presented Canadian National Junior Achievers' awards at a annual confernce in Ottawa this week.

Cindy Majocha, 1741 Kisber, of Oak Bjy, won a $100 award as runner-up for president of the year.

Laura Porcher, 2817 Murray, Esquimalt, won a $50 award from the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants as runner-up for treasurer of the year and the Company of the Year for Canada award was presented to president of T-Jays Company, Alan Petersen, 2135 Sandowne, Oak Bay.

Beauty III

SMOKE SPEWED FROM DETROIT

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Edison Co. employees say one of the utility's power plants was responsible for the oily soot that fell on both sides of the Detroit River for two nights.

One Edison worker, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday that black smoke "so thick you could walk across it" began spewing from a smokestack at Edison's River Rouge plant Sunday night.

A worker on the Sunday midnight shift said Edison smokestacks were "blowing out smoke all night" and the situation was not corrected until an inspector closed a faulty damper at 8 a.m. Monday.

Falling soot blanketed a 10-mile band cutting across Detroit, several suburbs and Windsor, Ont., across the Detroit River.

Authorities were inundated with complaints about blackened cars, boats, homes and clothes.

A spokesman for the air pollution control division of the Wayne County health department said Tuesday that a civil suit will be filed under Michigan's Environmental Protection Act of 1970.

Under the statute, the air pollution division can seek only to have Detroit Edison ordered to present a program to rectify, and avoid recurrences of, the problem. No monetary or punitive judgments can be sought.

Detroit Edison officials declined to comment on the planned suit.

The health department spokesman said the fallout came during a fuel changeover at the Edison plant.

He said the utility was switching to a less-polluting fuel in co-operation with the county program to comply with federal air-quality standards.
